Businesses in peril

■ Looming closure
has local merchants
fearing for the worst

by STEPHEN SHAW
Staff Reporter

The pending closure of up to 60 per cent of snowmobiling and skiing trails owned by private forest owners will "devastate" the region's economy, costing thousands of jobs and sparing no one, from resorts and lodges to restaurants and gas bars, predict many local merchants.

With the Nov. 1st deadline set by the Haliburton County Forest Owners Association looming, business owners are fearful that the shut down, if it goes ahead as planned, will create a "domino effect" on the area's economy and possibly lead to "the death of winter tourism" in the region, said Haliburton Highlands Chamber of Commerce President Brian Dean in a press release issued last Wednesday.

To increase public awareness and drive home the harsh reality of what the closure would mean to the community, the owners of Back Woods Marine, Gloria and James Carnochan, have launched a letter campaign which has been forwarded to MPP Chris Hodgson, Minister of Culture, Tourism and Recreation Anne Swarbrick, Minister of Natural Resources Howard Hampton and Ontario Premier Bob Rae.

Many winter trails run through privately-owned forest property, through which access is normally permitted by owners.

Dean estimates that up to 150 full-time and part-time local workers will lose their jobs if a resolution to cancellation of the Managed Forest Tax Rebate program issue isn't reached by the Nov. 1st deadline, imposed as a bargaining tool by the Haliburton Forest Owners Association (HFOA) in their fight with the province.

Those numbers, however, may only be the tip of the iceberg if the impact of a closure on the region as a whole is taken into consideration.

"The situation will have a domino effect," fears Gloria Carnochan. "Resorts, dealerships, gas bars, parts stores, restaurants, food stores, department stores, even hairdressers will be devastated by this," predicts Carnochan, who is faced with the dilemma of not knowing whether or not to begin building a new snowmobile repair shop. "We don't know if there is even going to be a need for it with this whole thing hanging over our heads."

"People don't seem to be aware that there isn't a business in the community that won't be affected... the whole region stands a chance of going bankrupt," she said.

The letter blitz started by Carnochan, who believes that people in the region don't fully understand the potentially dire consequences of the conflict, has received 27 responses from various people who rely on the skiing and snowmobiling industry to attract tourists to the area.

Rip's Sleepy Hollow owner Mary Urquhart voiced her concerns in a letter and painted a grave picture. If access is denied to the forests, she wrote, "we may as well lock our doors and say good-bye to an 11 year-old successful business. Think of the impact on our staff who would have to be permanently laid off."

Allan Fletcher, President of Tall Pines Snowmobile Club in Dorset, which relies on open access through private lands for recreational trails, echoed those same concerns. "Rural communities such as Dorset cannot afford to lose tourism dollars in the winter — its only other winter potential is Unemployment Insurance Compensation."

In the letter Fletcher also raised concerns about the safety of snowmobilers if they are re-routed to plowed roads and lakes "which cannot be guaranteed to

Split vote derails acute care plan

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

When Tuesday night's motion to consolidate the county's acute care beds at the Haliburton Hospital was defeated, people from Minden threw up their hats in celebration and people from Haliburton groaned at the thought of the continuing debate.

The vote was 7-7 and according to the rules, that meant the motion in favour of the Haliburton site was defeated. There could be no tie-breaking vote because there are 14 people on the Acting Health Services Board and after some procedural finagling, the chairman had already exercised his vote.

The issue must now go back to the board for further debate.

About 130 people attended Tuesday's meeting at the Haliburton Legion, with a seemingly equal split between Haliburton and Minden supporters. Also present were several county and municipal councillors, Frank Lussing of St. Joseph's Hospital (which owns both the Minden and Haliburton Hospitals) and Dawn Berry-Merriam of the District Health Council. The audience was very well behaved, listening in silence to the debate and keeping most of their comments to themselves after the vote was announced.

The only person who received sustained applause from the audience was Joyce Gostock, one of the Haliburton board members.

"I hope that every member has given full thought to what happens if we go around and around, which is what we've been doing," she said before the vote. "We have to make a decision before this window of opportunity closes. If we lose the 30 long-term care beds and the upgrading of Hyland Crest, (two other components of the healthcare project), we're doing a great disservice to this county. We have to come together."

In essence, arguments in favour of consolidating the beds in Haliburton were:

- it is the most central location
- the Ministry of Health favours this site
- the medical community is

THANKFUL TIMES: Gerald Sharp, Taryn Thomas and Carrie Feir were among the children at J. Douglas Hodgson Elementary School who told The Echo what they are thankful for this Thanksgiving. Families and pets are high on the list.

Kids thankful for families, pets

by PETER DOWNS
Staff Reporter

Traditionally, Thanksgiving has been a holiday that draws families together to celebrate their relationships over an elaborate home-cooked feast.

And, if a sampling of children from J. Douglas Hodgson Elementary School can be used as an indicator, that tradition is still going strong.

But don't forget pets. Aside from their brothers and sisters and parents and grandparents, it seems kids are most thankful for some other members of the family, like dogs and cats and hamsters.

"I'm thankful for having my brother, who bought me a Sega Genesis, and my three cousins, Scott and Spencer and Stephen, and my parents and my grandparents and my dogs Sadie and Maggie and Buff," said Grade 3 student Erin Burch.

Josh Foyster, also in Grade 3, said he has a special reason to be happy this Thanksgiving.

"I'm happy to be with my family because my mom and dad got separated and now they're getting back together again," he said. "I'm happy for our house and for the school and I'm happy that every one's happy in my family."

Josh also said he is happy to have his dog, Bonnie.

Grade 3 student Reuben Maughan said, "I'm thankful for everything. I'm thankful for being alive and for having parents and for my friends."

After a little more thought, Reuben said he is also pretty thankful "for food and water" and for his three grandparents.

"I'm thankful that I have a house and that I have a good family that loves me," said Kaelan Fitzgerald, a Grade 4 student. "And I'm thankful that my cat's healthy and my brother and mom."

Kaelan's classmate, David Morgan, is looking forward to his Thanksgiving dinner.

"I'm thankful for the food and the people who raised the turkey and all that," he said. "I'm thankful for the toys that I have and for my house and that I live on Riverside Drive."

"I'm thankful for the food and my family, my clothes, the warmth in my house," said Taryn Thomas, a Grade 6 student. "I'm thankful that my cat didn't die. It was attacked by two dogs and got stitches all over the place."

Gerald Sharp, who had been listening closely to his classmate Taryn's answer, said "I'm thankful for my family, my good home, my clothes, food."

He added in later that he is thankful for his hamster, Max, and his friends.

Carrie Feir, who had been listening to both Taryn and Gerald, said, "I'm thankful for my family, my home, my clothes and for school. Oh, and my friends."

Morning fire destroys farmhouse

HOUSE GUTTED: Dysart fire chief Miles Maughan and Kim Cowen examine damage caused to the Cowen farmhouse on County Rd. 1 in a blaze Friday. Damage to the property was estimated between $80,000 and $100,000.

by PETER DOWNS
Staff Reporter

An early morning fire on Friday destroyed a farmhouse on County Rd. 1, just outside the village of Haliburton.

The property is owned by Murray and Kim Cowen and was being rented by Dean Fyfe. No one was home at the time of the fire.

The Dysart Fire Department received the fire call at 2:52 a.m. and arrived at the scene six minutes later, said fire chief Miles Maughan.

Damage to the completely gutted two-storey building is estimated between $80,000 and $100,000, said the fire chief.

Twenty-three fire fighters battled the blaze and finally extinguished it by 6 a.m.

Several fire fighters stayed at the scene until about 9:30 a.m. in an effort to determine the cause of the blaze, but were unable to do so, said Maughan.

The fire department has finished its investigation into the cause of the fire, he said.

The Echo takes a holiday

Here, There and Everywhere...

Let this be a word of warning: Someone brought in a speeding ticket from the new photo radar system. For driving 25 km above the 80km speed limit, the driver was fined $99. And he wasn't even on the 401! The ticket is from a trip to Peterborough. Around the Echo office and later at the Haliburton Rotary Club, the ticket generated a lot of interest. The photos are really quite clear: one shows the back of the driver and vehicle; the other is a close-up of the licence plate.

CBC Radio reported that 70 people cheered when a Brighton judge found Steve Bowskill not guilty of two weapons charges last week. Bowskill is a pharmacist in Colborne, but he also spends part of his week with his family at his home in Eagle Lake. A couple of months ago, Bowskill caught two thieves trying to steal drugs from his pharmacy. When they ran out of the store and started speeding away, Bowskill shot at the car's tires with a revolver in an attempt to slow them down. He said that previous experience had taught him that it takes the Brighton OPP a half hour to get to Colborne and he felt he had a right to protect his store from vandalism. It was the eighth time his store had been broken into. The police disagreed and laid two charges against him for using the gun. In response, people in the community raised $7,000 to help pay for Bowskill's legal fees, which are about $20,000. If Bowskill had been found guilty, he might have lost his pharmacy licence.

Panama City's loss is Minden's gain... Every winter, John and Margaret Foster usually enjoy the sunshine in Panama City in Florida. This winter, however, they've decided to stay put at their home in Minden. But they don't want to stay at home all the time. They're offering line dancing at the Minden Community Centre every Friday morning from 10 until noon, beginning Oct. 14. All they ask is that people make a $1 donation. The Fosters were taught how to line dance by Dorothy Jean Connors in Stanhope, and got so proficient at it they were the ones giving the lessons down in Florida, where they had as many as 157 people out for a morning of fun and exercise. Half the music they dance to is traditional, the other half is country and western. For more information, call 286-2012.

Wendy Bateman is at it again. The creator of the woven sweat lodge made with recycled plastic bags is now taking part in another "recyclers' show. From October 22 to November 11, her woven family heirlooms will be on display at the Kent Farndale Gallery at the Scugog Memorial Library in Port Perry. Mrs. Bateman and her husband Sid Brinkman, who helps her prepare her fabrics for weaving, live on Blue Hawk Lake.

The municipal elections in November have already started to garner a lot of interest, both among potential candidates and voters who want some answers. There will be an all-candidates meeting for Glamorgan ratepayers on Saturday, Oct. 8 at 2 p.m. at the Community Centre in Gooderham. For Dysart et al ratepayers, the Haliburton District Real Estate Board, in conjunction with the Haliburton County Echo, is sponsoring an all-candidates meeting on November 3 at 7:30 p.m. at the Haliburton Community Funeral Home.

Congratulations to Kinark Child and Family Services, which was recently honoured with an Award for Outstanding Management by the Child Welfare League of America. Kinark is one of the largest children's mental health services in Ontario, providing service to more than 3,600 children and their families. There is an office in Haliburton village.

Mark your calendar for the Supertrax International Snowmobilers Show at the Markham Fairgrounds, McCowan Road and Elgin Mills Road, on October 14, 15 and 16. The Haliburton County Snowmobile Association is working with the Haliburton Highlands Chamber of Commerce to present a Haliburton Highlands area display at the big show. It's also a great place to buy your HCSA Consumer's Choice Draw tickets, and you could win a 1995 snowmobile from Arctic Cat, Ski Doo, Polaris or Yamaha.

October is Mental Health Awareness Month and the Haliburton County Counselling Centre is holding several public forums to help raise local awareness. On Oct. 12 at the Home Support office (Echo Hills apartments), Dr. Elspeth MacEwan will talk about anxiety and stress management. The forum is from 7 to 9 p.m.. Dr. MacEwan will also address a doctor's forum on Oct. 11 from 4 to 6 p.m., a forum for social service providers from 9 a.m. to noon on Oct. 12 and a consumer workshop at 2 p.m. on Oct. 13.

Ann McKay of Carnarvon brought in two newspapers for our perusal. One is the Windsor Star, which wrote about the Legion Ladies Auxiliary convention in that city. The convention was attended by several Highlands representatives, including Mrs. McKay. The second newspaper was a 1955 edition of the Globe and Mail, with a picture of Marilyn Bell's homecoming in Toronto after her successful swim across the English Channel. Mrs. McKay can remember when Marilyn Bell became the first person to swim across Lake Ontario. Mrs. McKay was in labour but she wouldn't let her husband Max drive her to the Haliburton Hospital. "I wasn't going anywhere until Marilyn made it to shore," says Mrs. McKay, who remembers sitting by the radio listening to reports about Bell's progress and saying "I wish she'd get to Toronto so I can get to Haliburton." A daughter was born a few hours after the triumphant completion of the marathon swim. As an aside, former Echo reporter Linda Shutt, who's now working at the St. Catharines Standard, got her first front-page story when she interviewed Marilyn Bell, who now lives in New Jersey, on the 40th anniversary of the Lake Ontario swim.

Following the debate about where the 45th parallel is, Echo publisher Len Pizzezy brought his Global Positioning System into work. The navigation device was pointed at the Curry Motors sign which says downtown Haliburton is halfway between the equator and North Pole. Well, almost. According to the GPS, which is accurate within 100m, we're only "2 minutes" off the mark.

THANKSGIVING DRESSING: Parking meters along main street, Haliburton are all spiffed up for the holidays, thanks to the efforts of the Haliburton and District Association for Community Living. Here, Doug, Johnson attaches some leaves and colourful tape to a meter.

Rare bird, VCRs and stereo nabbed in school break-in

by PETER DOWNS
Staff Reporter

A rare, stuffed golden eagle was among several items stolen during a break-in last weekend at Archie Stouffer Elementary School.

Thieves who broke into the school late last Saturday night or early Sunday morning made off with the bird, a television, a portable stereo and two VCRs, according to the Minden OPP. The school was not vandalized, as it was in an earlier break-in, said OPP Community Services Officer Michael Landry.

The culprits apparently gained entry to the school by breaking a door window on the north side of the school. Once they were inside the building, they entered the library, a classroom and the staff room. Windows to the library and staff room were also broken.

A teacher who arrived at the school early Sunday morning noticed that the library window was broken and that a portable stereo was missing. She left the school property to phone principal Peter Forgrave, who in turn notified the police, said Constable Landry.

When discussing the break-in at a meeting of the Haliburton County Board of Education meeting last week, Superintendent of Business Administration Jim Bradley, said, "If anyone finds what looks to be a stuffed golden eagle they might want to pass it on to the proper authorities." While the theft of the bird may sound funny, said Anson, Hinder and Minden trustee Wally Bunn, it is actually a serious matter. Because golden eagles are so rare, it is necessary for those who plan to have them mounted obtain a licence from the Ministry of Natural Resources.

The MNR will not issue licences for endangered birds of prey that it feels were illegally killed.

ASES principal Forgrave said the endangered bird was donated to the school several years ago by a parent of one of the students.

Beds and roads are key issues for deputy reeve hopeful

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

The location of the hospital beds is the biggest issue facing the county, says one of Dysart et al's candidates for deputy-reeve.

Bill Davis said he walked away from Tuesday's meeting of the Acting Health Services Board "saddened and disillusioned" because a decision had not been made.

Haliburton County for the first time had an opportunity to grab the golden egg and it was fumbled," he said in an Echo interview.

He believes a decision must be made soon and when it is, the county will be a major player in providing financial backing.

Several things bothered him about the meeting. One was the inclusion of Coboconk in the catchment area of the Minden Hospital. As an ambulance dispatcher at the Lindsay office, Davis knows that less than 2% of the calls in Coboconk are taken to Minden. If injuries are non-life threatening, crews will often take patients to Lindsay because more services are available. "It was a smokescreen," he says of the inflation of Minden's catchment area.

He was also bothered that board member Bev MacDuff seemed to be speaking on behalf of county council, which had passed a motion stating it believed in the principle of hospitals in both locations even though the Ministry of Health has said acute care beds must be at one site. The county's motion "muddled the waters" and MacDuff, who is also Glamorgan's reeve, is not supposed to be a political representative on the board, Davis says.

As a result of the split vote, he says the committee should tell the Ministry it is not able to conclude the issue. "The Ministry of Health should intervene and put the hospital where their preference is or allow Minden to have seven beds."

Wherever the beds are, Davis says it's important to move ahead before a provincial election is called. If a decision isn't made and a new government steps in, "there's an opportunity for the government to abscond (and not honour the financial commitments.) We must take advantage of the money now."

If the project stalls, then county taxpayers may be footing the approximately $500,000 bill to repair Hyland Crest. Repairs are needed but could be covered under the province's plan to upgrade the senior citizens home as part of the hospital package if the plan goes ahead.

Other county issues include the problems at Hyland Crest. Davis sat on the home's board of management committee back in '85 and '86 and "we had similar problems only different personnel, but the home still did function well."

Since then, he says "politicians seemed to get more involved in the home and were not staying an arm's length away... The new council will have to set the rules and make every effort to keep politicians at arm's length."

Political interference is not the only issue facing Hyland Crest, but he believes it should be addressed.

He also disagrees with the county's application for infrastructure funds to build a new county building. "There is some sort of agenda by somebody and it certainly is not a priority at this time." (He expanded on his objections in a letter to the editor a few weeks ago.)

The financial plight of the county has been made worse by the depletion of reserves. "To me that's not a good plan. I'm a small business man who's struggled for the past three years - I know the value of a dollar... There's no tooth fairy, there's only taxpayers."

On a municipal level, he says "Dysart's been managed reasonably well." Despite budget squeezes, it's imperative that money continue to be spent on roads to make sure they are maintained properly. If too many cuts on roads spending are made, then it will be more expensive to fix problems later.

On the extension of the sewage line along the north shore of Lake Kashagawigamog, he says "I would like to see the figures so that cottage owners aren't subsidizing resorts."

He also wonders why it would cost roughly $6,000 per residential property to hook on and "highly suspects" the cost should be lower than that. If the cost is lower, he believes there wouldn't be as much opposition from people along the proposed route. As well, he believes that being hooked on to a sewer line will enhance people's properties.

"What really puzzles me is why we couldn't put a plant down there but I guess we're beyond that now."

But it's important that some-

"There's no tooth fairy, there's only taxpayers," says Bill Davis, who's running for Dysart deputy-reeve thing be done to protect the quality of lake water. "We sell tourism and without water and bush, we won't have it."

This brings up the issue of the forest owners' fight against the abolition of the Managed Forest Tax Rebate program. "Common sense seems to be going by the wayside on all levels of government," he says, agreeing with the forest owners' view that they should be given the same tax consideration as farmers because in essence they plant trees.

If the proposed trails and tours goes ahead, Davis says Dysart should be willing to chip in some money to pay for the trails which go through the municipality.

Asked what skills he'd bring to the job as deputy, Davis says "I bring experience. I've served on county council and probably ever major committee, including the gypsy moth committee. I have a knowledge of the issues because some of them have been around for eight years."

Davis was first elected as deputy-reeve in 1985. He stepped down in 1986 because of a potential conflict of interest. He was working with the ambulance service, which at that time was a municipal responsibility.

But by the 1988 elections, the service was no longer run by Dysart and Davis was again successful in his bid for deputy. When Murray Fearrey stepped down as reeve, Davis filled the reeve's role for about 18 months.

In the 1991 election, he decided not to put his name forward because he had just got a job as an ambulance dispatcher in Lindsay. His business, Color Your World in Haliburton, was struggling because of the recession and he felt his first priority was his family so he wanted to have a full-time job. (It is still not easy to be in business. He admits his business taxes are in arrears but says he is on a monthly payment schedule to bring them up to date.) As well, at the time he didn't know what his work schedule would be and he didn't think it would be fair to either ratepayers or his employers to run for council.

Since then, however, he has discovered that he works 13 shifts a month.

Asked why he's decided to jump back into political life, he says "I never really wanted to get out but in all fairness to both parties I had to." He also says he's a "political animal." People run for office because "the underlying factor is they see what's happening and they think they can contribute more than what's being offered."

Bob Nicholand and Sid Cooper are also running for deputy.

Councillors Gerry Walker and Robert Heinze have both announced their intention to run for re-election.

Angels of mercy can ease the aftermath of tragedy

by STEPHEN SHAW
Staff Reporter

They come from all different walks of life yet they share one common interest - helping others in times of need.

Guiding victims and their families through the aftermath of tragedy is the main objective of the Crisis Assistance Program (CAP), started earlier this year by the Supportive Initiative for Residents in the County of Haliburton (SIRCH).

A lack of after hours emergency support programs was the impetus behind the formation of the volunteer, emergency support group, said SIRCH Executive Director Gena Robertson.

"We don't have access to the dollars in the community for crisis workers so on the weekends or after 5:00 p.m. there's not a lot available for people in need of emotional support services."

The concept for the program, which is being used as a model for similar projects in Peterborough and Lindsay, originated after hearing about a group started in the United States.

As well as helping with basic immediate needs such as providing food, clothing, shelter and contacting family members, the general role of the 26 angels of mercy who make up CAP is to offer the practical and emotional support needed to aid victims and their families through traumatic situations.

Referred only through the police, fire department, hospitals or funeral homes, the four or five person teams have been called to a variety of situations involving car accidents and domestic violence since its inception earlier this year.

Minden OPP Detachment Commander Sgt. Dennis Edlington said that while his staff was at first hesitant to utilize the program, they now rely on it to ease the pressures of their own job. "It does take pressure off of us and allow us to get on with the investigation and deal with the offenders...so we don't have to leave the victims hanging at a time when they need assistance the most," said Edlington. "Normally if a person was injured and taken to the hospital we would just get a quick statement and leave them with the hospital which doesn't really have the resources."

Edlington said his detachment has called the CAP volunteers to various situation about eight times in the last two months.

The program began last February after an intense 50-hour training period for volunteers, and while "there was a lull at the beginning until people got to know we were there, we're now getting about a call once a week on average," said Robertson.

Designated into five person teams which rotate on a weekly basis, each volunteer carries their own pager with them while on call from 5 p.m. to 8 a.m. weekdays and around the clock on weekends. While the emotional strain for volunteers can be high, it is far outweighed by the personal satisfaction that comes with helping others, said two volunteers.

"We are just interested in being good neighbours and showing compassion to people who need it," said Volunteer Co-ordinator Betty Pollard.

The program welcomes more volunteers and a new training session begins in November.

In appreciation of a great year!

Split vote derails consolidated care plan

The arguments against Haliburton were:

- Minden is accessible to more people, especially when northern Victoria and Peterborough Counties are taken into consideration

- there is uncertainty about the definitions of "urgent care" and whether the Ministry of Health will guarantee the service if the Minden Hospital no longer has acute care beds

- there is hope that the Ministry will re-consider its demand to consolidate the beds at one site

Board members knew that Haliburton's Barb Dawson was going to propose a motion to consolidate the beds in Haliburton.

But before the debate on the motion got underway, there was debate about whether the motion should be debated.

"I don't see how we can make the decision unless we know what services they will allow (in Minden) and whether they will fund them," said Minden's Paul Heffer. (The Ministry has said that urgent care facilities must be provided in both communities. If Minden loses its acute care beds, it would have an urgent care facility built onto Hyland Crest.)

"We have precious little information with which to make decisions," agreed Minden's Doug Campbell. With such important repercussions, he wanted more information before voting.

Glamorgan's Bev MacDuff wondered if correct parliamentary procedure was being followed. Eventually it turned out that Dawson had properly given her notice to motion at the last meeting, but in the agenda for Tuesday's meeting, it was improperly listed as notice of motion. It should have read that it was a vote on Dawson's motion. Proper procedure was being followed.

Dawson then outlined her arguments.

Last December, the Ministry announced a $10.6-million package for capital expansion. It included the construction of 30 long-term care beds at Haliburton Hospital, the provision of urgent care facilities at Minden and Haliburton, the consolidation of acute care beds at one site of the board's choosing, and the upgrading of Hyland Crest.

In a letter dated August 10, 1994, the Ministry said the decision on the acute care beds must be made as soon as possible and that the Ministry "does not support revisiting of the data".

The board must make a decision in light of the fact that 10 hospitals are being closed in Toronto, two of the four hospitals in Windsor/Essex are being closed and the Kingston Psychiatric Hospital just had $6-million cut from its $47-million budget, Dawson said.

Her reasons for preferring the Haliburton site are as follows:

- 40 beds are needed to make a hospital economically viable and this is possible when the long-term care beds and acute care beds are in Haliburton

- Hyland Crest will undergo a major physical expansion

- an urgent care facility will be built onto Hyland Crest

- consolidation does not mean the loss of jobs

- there are seven full-time doctors in Haliburton who have practised a combined total of 79 years in the village. The Haliburton Family Medical Practice is also a certified rural teaching practice through the Faculty of Medicine in Toronto

- urgent care is people's main concern and it is being guaranteed in both communities. If people need care over several days, they are admitted to an acute care bed and "with Haliburton being in the centre, you are able to serve more of our area."

- "we know that when pressed the Ministry of Health prefers the Haliburton site based on their assessment of what would be best for Haliburton County" spoke against the motion, saying it didn't take into consideration the populations of northern Victoria and Peterborough Counties. He says this adds a further 14,000 to the Minden Hospital's catchment area. Minden doctors also have clinics in Kinmount and Cobocok.

Ted Wilkes of Galway Township (Victoria County)

As to the promises of an urgent care facility, he says there's been no discussion on how many medical staff people will be on duty and whether it will be open 24 hours a day. "I don't think urgent care with an observation bed is meaningful," Wilkes says.

Minden's Doug Campbell says he uses slightly different figures but comes to the same conclusion that there are more people using the Minden Hospital than the Haliburton Hospital. He says Haliburton serves only 37% of the population. "I suggest that the reason the Ministry is making this recommendation (favouring Haliburton) is they have made a mistake in having the 30 long-term care beds to serve 37% of the population. It doesn't make sense and it's not economically viable."

He says when he questioned the Ministry, officials said "Doug, it's not to be questioned." As to the assertion that the Ministry's recommendation should be followed, "I say nonsense to you. I think it has to go back to the Ministry whether they like it or not."

Glamorgan's Bev MacDuff didn't want the decision on acute care beds to be made until the meaning of urgent care was dealt with. (She later gave a notice of motion of some of her proposals,

"We are dealing with human lives," said Gord Monk, speaking against the motion. "I have a real concern about what this urgent care is and I think we need some reassurances it won't be an 8-to-10 operation. I have asked time and time again what is urgent care and I haven't got a satisfactory answer. This way (voting now), I feel very uncomfortable. I'd hate to do a disservice to the people of Haliburton or Minden or Cobocok or Kinmount. Everyone is important."

Minden's Paul Heffer agreed. "Unless we establish what's available to the other community and the type of funding, I don't feel comfortable making a decision. If we put the beds in Minden, would you feel comfortable with the definition of urgent care we have now?"

Barbara Dawson uses a map to make her argument in favour of the Haliburton site

Urgent care has been described as an emergency department "without the beds down the hall." Co-ordinator Kate Reed says her research shows it will be the committee's role to define what urgent care services will be available based on the needs of the community. Likewise, a patient could be in an observation bed for an hour or a day, based on limits set by the board.

Rheta Jones was the only Minden board member in agreement with the motion. "I am wanting to push ahead because I feel if we don't do so we'll lose this opportunity."

"This vote has a lot to do about whether we go against the Ministry which has said 'Don't bother revisiting the data but hurry up and make your decision,'" says Haliburton's Hugh Nichol. "If we vote and say we want to take on the Ministry, that's fine, it's democratic. But there's an election coming up and (and unless a vote is conclusive) they'll put it at the bottom of the pile and in three to five years we'll get back to this stage. If you look to Alberta, with Ralph Kline being successful in shutting down hospitals, I'm not sure whether the rules of the game will be the same in five years."

But the Ministry's decision to consolidate the beds - which had never been recommended by a local committee - doesn't work in a rural area, Campbell said. Some of the Ministry officials haven't displayed "common sense or intelligence" and he doesn't believe the board should follow their wishes. "For heaven's sake, let's do the right thing and if it takes another six months, then okay."

MacDuff said there is an opportunity to negotiate with the Ministry and she doesn't think it should be neglected. She believes the Ministry officials must sit down and talk with the board.

Gostock pointed out that this was only MacDuff's second meeting with the board and at previous meetings, the Ministry officials have often been in attendance. They say they will attend when asked so they will know they would be welcomed.

Looking around the crowded auditorium, Dawson said she saw many of the people who met with the Ministry in 1989, when approval for the former chronic care unit was frozen. At that time, former health minister Elinor Caplan said a review of the data would take two months. There have been five years of meetings since then.

"We can buck it if we like but I think we do so at our own peril," she said, pointing out that last month the Haliburton Hospital was at 150% capacity and the long-term care beds are needed immediately.

There was then a debate about whether to allow the request by Haliburton's Ken Wilson to have a secret ballot. Because of the sensitive nature of the vote, he felt it would allow members to vote according to their conscience, not according to their geographic location.

Roger's Rules of Order say that if one person makes a request, it must be followed. But was the board following Roger's rules? No guidelines have been set for board procedure; instead, it has been following those of the Ministry and St. Joseph's Hospital.

Campbell said the request was "absolute nonsense... With something as serious as this, the board has to have the courage to stand up and be identified."

Wilkes said most board members had already expressed their preference and privacy wasn't needed. But Jones said she agreed to a ballot vote because it allowed Baker an opportunity to vote as chairman.

Baker asked for a show of hands for support of using Roger's Rule, and it was passed, approximately six for, five against, with some abstaining.

The board then voted by ballot on Dawson's motion. The 7-7 vote meant the motion was defeated.

You be the judge...

In the debate about where to put the acute care beds, a lot of figures have been tossed about, so to help people make up their own minds about local demographics The Echo compiled this population map. The "voters" statistics are from the assessment office and are for 1994. However, these figures only include owners and tenants of all properties (seasonal and permanent), not the children under 18 and not the children over 18 of seasonal residents. The "students" statistics are from 1994 enrollment figures at county schools, with populations being allocated to the municipality in which the school sits. Since all high school students attend HHSS, we divided the number of high school students equally between Haliburton and Minden. There are no statistics included for pre-school children

Board brought back to table after defeat of consolidated bed plan

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

Now that the Acting Health Services Board has defeated a motion to consolidate acute care beds in Haliburton, the big question is "Where do we go from here?"

Minden board member Paul Heffer wants the board to fight the Ministry's dictum that the beds must be consolidated in one site. He and many of the other Minden representatives want the beds to remain in both Minden and Haliburton.

"I'm not afraid to negotiate with the Ministry on that point, although they've made some pretty strange and strong statements," he said. He also wants a cost comparison of consolidating the beds versus the status quo, with the new Minden Hospital built on the Hyland Crest site.

But a frustrated Hugh Nichol asked what more the board can do. Last December's announcement about the funding, which included the order to consolidate the beds, was from the Minister of Health. Ministry officials have attended local board meetings and looked over the data themselves. They say they prefer the Haliburton site.

"If the deputy minister says no (to the status quo) then it's dead over," Nichol said. If the Ministry demands consolidation, "it doesn't matter what resolutions we make. I think it's a wonderful idea not to consolidate. It would stop a lot of turmoil." He doubts, however, whether the Ministry will agree to open it all up again.

How could he say that, asked Glamorgan's Bev MacDuff, if the board had yet to hear her suggestions? She had tried to present her views about alternatives earlier in the meeting but Chairman Stuart Baker said it was more appropriate to introduce them under new business. At this point, he gave MacDuff permission to read her suggestions, which will be discussed at the next board meeting.

the 19 acute care beds would be in Haliburton (10 from Haliburton, nine from Minden) but Minden would get seven stabilization beds. (The Ministry had agreed to an observation bed at the site which would just have urgent care facilities)

• outpatient accommodation and an adult day program should be investigated

• 24-hour emergency/urgent care and heliport facilities

• Hyland Crest should be reclassified as a health care centre, still managed by the county

• the Ministry should meet with the board to discuss these suggestions

Baker replied that "we'd be moving back to the planning and development stage rather than the implementation stage" which is the board's mandate. (Prior to this board there was a Haliburton County Planning and Development Committee, which in turn had replaced a steering committee about long-term care issues. The hospital issue has been addressed by committees since 1989 when the Ministry froze permission for 19 chronic care beds in Haliburton.)

Minden's Doug Campbell disagreed. He says what's different is "we had a vote tonight that said no. I think that's on our side."

He said the Ministry would be very "foolish" not to be swayed against Haliburton based on some of the data he's collected in favour of the Minden site.

"Do you know what you're condemning us to? Starting all over," replied Nichol. If a decision isn't made soon, "by the end of this decade there won't be a Minden Hospital and there won't be a Haliburton Hospital."

By trying to get the Ministry to change its mind, "we're reinventing the wheel."

"We are where we are and we should be realistic," said Galway's Ted Wilkes, who believes serious consideration should be given to re-negotiating with the Ministry. "They're reasonable people and we should try to get a meaningful facility for both communities. I don't think we can ignore it without trying."

Minden's Rheta Jones said that MacDuff's motion opened up the whole planning debate already. The Ministry has already said what it would fund and approve and any changes would affect such things as staffing patterns.

Back in 1989, the Ministry of Health stalled the hospital project. Now the board has stalled the project, said Baker, who said he had voted in favour of the Haliburton site.

There was also a lengthy debate about whether to allow proxy votes. It was finally decided that proxy votes can be used when there's been a notice of motion on an important issue.

The next board meetings are October 12 at Our Lady of Fatima Church in Minden, and October 25 at Haliburton Legion.

Who's accountable?

The anger and frustration were palpable in Haliburton village the day after the Acting Health Services Board voted in effect to jeopardize Haliburton County's healthcare services. By having a split vote and defeating the motion to have the acute care beds consolidated in Haliburton, the board is condemning the county to more waiting, more meetings, and more uncertainty about the future.

There are valid arguments for both locations - truly valid arguments. But the Ministry of Health has said it prefers Haliburton and it's the Ministry which is paying all of the operating costs and two-thirds of the construction costs. That same Ministry has the power to close hospitals, which it's doing across the province, despite the resulting outcry. Haliburton County has a population of 50,000 people, including cottagers. There are 9.6-million people in Ontario. If the Ministry ever decides to restrict services here, is it really going to be swayed by the protests of .5% of its constituency? The protests fell on deaf ears when 600 people gathered at the high school in 1989 to fight against the cancellation of the chronic care beds. What has changed?

We must be realistic. We must also recognize that decisions are made by the bureaucracy, not the politicians, including the ministers. Ministry officials have heard all the arguments put forth over the past years and they still want the beds in Haliburton.

It should also be remembered that financing for hospitals is different from that of schools or municipal governments. The school board is about to raise $2-million through property taxes to finance school expansions. When the county or municipal governments need to increase services, they too raise taxes. But consider the reaction of St. Joseph's Hospital's executive director to the increase of deficits at the Haliburton and Minden Hospitals. Instead of saying we need more funding to accommodate the increased demands, Frank Lussing says there must be cutbacks so the hospitals can meet their approved operating budgets. Hospitals are not consumer driven. Whether there's 10 patients or 100, hospitals must stay within their approved budget.

Board members must be held accountable for Tuesday's decision. Although this was only her second meeting, Bev MacDuff spoke against putting the beds in Haliburton because she had some ideas of her own. Are her ideas the same as those of the people in Wilberforce and Gooderham, who would prefer to have the beds in Haliburton? Doug Campbell of Minden is saying he can change the Ministry's mind about where to build the long-term care beds, even though it was a democratic decision by the previous Planning and Development Committee to put them in Haliburton. How democratic is it to keep trying to overturn the decision? This board's mandate is to implement the four items outlined by the Ministry last December, including the consolidation of the beds, and each member knew that when they were appointed. You can't get on the board and bring us back to the planning and development stage. The people of Haliburton County have been waiting for those long-term care beds for eight years. After last week's decision, some of the donors may be justified in fearing they'll be dead before the beds are actually built. The public is tired and frustrated with all the delays.

Board members are entitled to disagree with putting the beds in Haliburton but they have an even greater obligation to make sure we don't lose this golden opportunity to improve hospital facilities. Half the money is already being spent on the addition to Hyland Crest in Minden (a service not used by people in the eastern half of the county even though their property taxes support it) and half the money on the long-term care beds in Haliburton. If the Ministry sees that this board is not able to come to a decision, it can either let us wallow in our own misery or shrug its shoulders and say "Well, at least we tried" as it walks away from the whole mess.

Acute care decision disturbing

To the Editor from our Readers

To the Editor:

The following letter has been sent to Mr. Baker, Chairman of the Acting Health Services Board in response to events at last Tuesday night's meeting.

I am writing this letter as a concerned county resident. I have three concerns that I would appreciate being addressed by this committee regarding their policy as to who qualifies to be a committee member.

Concern I.

If a person holds a political office, he or she shouldn't be allowed to sit on this committee. A politician's role is to help this committee with obtaining funding, raising taxes and providing monies to help with the local share of fund raising.

I would like the two members that hold political office to resign. To vote against the chairperson from having a vote has been the worst political vote I have witnessed in all my life as a Haliburton County resident.

Concern II.

How are private business people, who benefit from health care services, able to sit on this committee. Do the committee members have the same "conflict of interest" regulation that pertains to local politicians? If so, then a few members should have declared a "conflict of interest" on the location of the acute care beds resolution.

Concern III.

If a person's residence is in another county, then this member shouldn't have a vote on resolutions.

Having been in attendance, and having watched the deciding vote on a major decision be a vote from another county, disturbs me as a resident of Snowdon.

I believe that the concerns of the neighbouring counties should be addressed, but Haliburton County was granted 10.6 million dollars for its health care. I sat in the audience, wondering who is representing Snowdon, Sherborne, Cardiff, Bicroft and Monmouth and their health needs. The new senior housing units for Wilberforce were overlooked in the split decision. These regions should have representation before outsiders. The people in these areas will be contributing money and tax dollars for the $3 million which is the county's share.

A committee that makes a decision not to decide should be reorganized. If you have to have a proxy vote, the trust is not there for this committee to go forward.

I would appreciate a reply to my three concerns.

George Simmons
(Reeve of Snowdon Township)

To the Editor:

I attended the meeting of the Acting Health Services Board on Tuesday, September 27 at the Haliburton Legion, and the first thing I want to say is that Mr. Stuart Baker should receive a gold medal for his handling of a very frustrating meeting.

I was under the impression (along with many others), that the Board's mandate was to consider the needs of Haliburton County and locate the long-term and acute care beds central to most residents in the county. I did not know that their mandate extended to include a large portion of Victoria and Peterborough counties. I, and probably most of the taxpayers of this county, would like to know if this comes from the Ministry of Health or not.

I understand that the Ministry of Health would prefer to have the long term and acute care beds located under one roof in Haliburton Village as it is central to all in the County of Haliburton. However, they have given this Board the opportunity to make a choice. If they had delved into the history of the area there would not have been a choice.

Please stop bucking the Ministry or we will end up not receiving any help and some area that is willing to accept the Ministry's advice will get it.

Broken hip stalls Dobzenskys' vacation

We recently received this letter from John Dobzensky, a Haliburton resident who broke his hip during a visit to his hometown, Chotebor, in the Czech Republic. Since Mr. Dobzensky and his wife have many friends in the Highlands, we thought we'd share this letter with our readers.

I am slowly recovering from an operation and a lengthy stay in a hospital, something I haven't been used to in all my 83 years! However, I am starting to walk with the help of two crutches, hoping to be soon fit enough to cross the Atlantic again.

Leo and I miss Haliburton and especially the companionship of our friends. We had a very hot summer, here in the "Czech Highlands" and now enjoy a beautiful fall, with colouring much like in Haliburton.

The country has progressed remarkably well, since we first returned in 1990, and one can now buy almost anything in the stores. Some of the services which we in Canada take for granted, like paying with cheques or credit cards, are still not widely available and we miss some of the vegetables, which can only be bought during the season, or frozen, but these are really small matters which don't bother us too much.

I am glad to hear that the summer season was a good one, as life in Haliburton depends so much on it. Please give my best to everyone at the "Echo".

Junior Citizen nominations are sought

This article was based upon an article published by the Bowmanville Canadian Statesman

AS ONTARIO'S AMBASSADORS of good news, the community newspaper industry seeks to acknowledge and encourage youth by bringing to light the many positive contributions which young people make to their communities.

Every week, the pages of this community newspaper and hundreds like it throughout Ontario contain articles about people who are the heart-beat of their communities.

Especially uplifting are those stories which recognize the bravery, acts of kindness and compassion or determination of the young people who set an example of service and leadership for the entire community.

Since 1981, the Ontario Junior Citizen of the Year Awards program has recognized the achievements of these outstanding young people.

Once again, this newspaper (and all other community papers across Ontario) are looking for nominations of individuals who might deserve this award.

Exactly who qualifies for such an honour? Well, the possibilities are endless. Past recipients have included young people who contributed to community life while coping with a physical or psychological limitation. Other recipients have volunteered their time and energy in community service work, or have responded unselfishly in a moment of crisis or emergency. Others might combine many of these characteristics and are honoured because they truly exemplify the characteristics of a "good kid." They are the helpful and courteous kind of young people you will find in each community within Ontario.

Keep your fork, there's pie

ANNECOTES
ANNE CREELMAN

I THINK EVERYONE has heard the story about the Duke who, while attending a dinner function in small town Canada, was told by the earthy server who was clearing his plate to hang on to his fork since there was pie to follow. Sounds like home doesn't it? Well it is time for us all to bring our pies and forks to the Haliburton County Museum for the Second Annual Harvest Pie Contest. Thanksgiving Saturday is the time and the Museum is the place for what I think is one of the best down home parties you are apt to find.

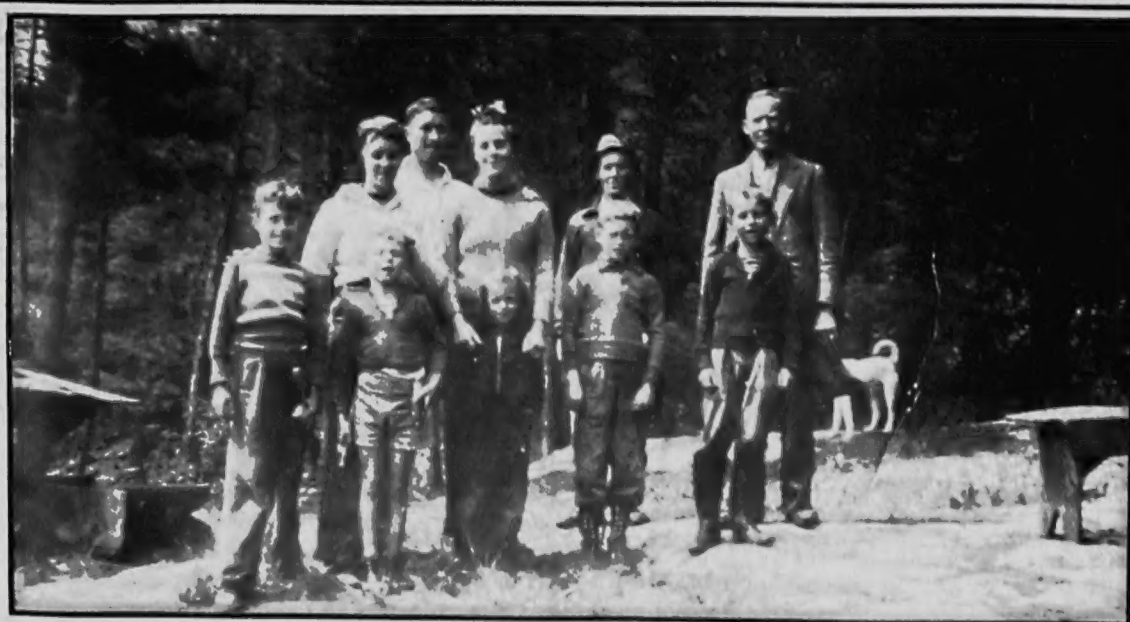

Last year's event was a runaway success. Contestant's anxiously waited to hear who had captured the appetites of the judges (who, by the way could not be bought!) while strolling the grounds of our beautiful museum. The excitement mounted when it was reported that the judges were deadlocked on a decision. The crowd gathered outside of the little house to cheer heartily for the winners in all categories. Then came the auction. When Chris Hodgson started the bidding on each of the prize winning pies, things really took off. Husbands were pressed to bid on their wives pies, mothers proudly bid on their daughters' pies, people who couldn't bake were willing to pay anything for a flaky crust. In one frenzied exchange, I felt like we were at Sotheby's bidding on a rare antique rather than a deep dish apple pie. It was great fun and after the auction, pie and coffee or tea could be purchased and enjoyed by all. The competition was friendly, the atmosphere was homey and the pies were fabulous.

Now the best part of an annual event is that they happen every year and I for one am glad this one is coming around again. I have never been a pie person. By that I mean I have never had much success with pastry. I have friends who can roll out pie crust as smooth as silk, as flaky as mica, and as tender as your heart. I really think it is something you are born with. You ask these people what their secret is and they merely shrug and smile. And if they knew, they probably wouldn't divulge it anyway! I, on the other hand, am terribly intimidated by the thought of making a pie. You wouldn't think something so simple could make me so tense. But look at the choices! Do you use cake and pastry or straight all purpose flour? Should I go with Crisco, butter or a combination of both? And what about Tenderflake, Madame Benoit's tried and true shortening? I've even heard some people talk about lard. As for the water, should it be hot or cold? Prior to baking, do you brush with milk or egg? The combinations and permutations are endless and we haven't even discussed the filling.

And so I have decided, enough is enough. I am going to throw caution to the wind, take the bull by the horns and conquer my fears. It is time to try my best to bake a pie and if it looks remotely like others I have seen, I think I will take it to the Harvest Pie Contest. It may take a few tries and I haven't yet decided what kind to make but there's nothing like a little healthy competition to spur a person on to great things. Well OK, maybe not great things but, at the very least, passable things. Really, how hard can it be, a little flour, a little pumpkin, a pie plate. Presto! I realize that I have probably sabotaged my chances, as judges may be leery to sample my wares, and that is fine. I will be happy if I can overcome my fear of pastry enough to produce the odd (perhaps a poor choice of words) pie every now and again.

So all you real bakers, be sure you get your cinnamon and flute your edges. If last year is any indication, I know the competition will be stiff and the pastry won't be! Come on out on Saturday to enter your pie or just eat someone else's. Even if you don't win, I'm pretty sure you'll have a good time. As for me, I'll be there - maybe with an entry, maybe not. I figure that if my pie flops, my family will be kind and eat it anyway. A little whipped cream hides a lot of flaws. Happy Thanksgiving everyone!

Pic of the Past

In the summer of 1939, the Bishop family, together with friends from Niagara Falls, spent their holidays at W. R. Curry's hunting camp on North Lake. The day this picture was taken they received a visit from W. R., his brother Andy and

Art and Me

by Marion J. Hare

OFTEN A PARTICULAR WORK of art catches the eye. Sometimes that image lingers and we wonder why.

Such was the case last week when I looked at Len Pizze's photograph of autumn in THE ECHO. The image lingered and so I returned to it and asked myself that question? What are the ingredients that make this particular photograph of leaves memorable for me?

Perhaps, foremost, the surprise that a black and white photograph can capture the essence of autumn when that season is synonymous with brilliant colour. This photograph is instantly recognizable as an autumn scene. The multiplicity of shades of grey contrasted to the touches of stark black and white is sufficient to suggest the multi-coloured leaves of autumn.

But beyond that singular feature the parts of the composition combine to make it an interesting whole, at least to me.

Landscape painters, we know, select aspects of nature and arrange them to create a particular impression. We tend to think that photographers have not the same freedom but in fact they do.

First, it takes an artistic eye to find in the mass of images that flood our eyes at all times those few special shots. This one is a notable example. In the wealth of colourful maple leaves that almost overwhelm us at this time of year could you easily pick out one tiny branch that can express the idea of autumn?

Having chosen a possible image then the photographer must make the critical decision - what angle will best set in place the compositional elements that will capture the image.

It is this last aspect that in the final analysis gives this work its ability to catch at least my eye and make me want to remember it because the more I look at it the more complexity I see in this supposedly simple photograph.

A branch of maple leaves opens towards the viewer like petals of a flower. That is what first is noticed. Then the nearly upright black trunk behind announces its presence. At this point I realize the formal characteristics that hold this scene together.

Formal is a jargon term and I dislike jargon but in this case it most succinctly describes the artistry in this work. Formal is a term when applied to art that describes those choices that an artist makes when setting up the composition that will best create the effect desired.

The one used here is that of the effect of dominant horizontal and vertical lines as opposed to strong diagonal lines. Artists, centuries ago, learned that emphasizing horizontal and vertical lines conveyed the sense of stability, of stillness, of permanence; whereas diagonal lines predominating created the feeling of movement, of tension, of an instant in time.

The black trunk, here is the primary formal characteristic that conveys tranquility in this photograph. The branch that crosses almost horizontally from the left adds to this. But a strict grid pattern would make the picture boring.

Only an artistic sense can determine, usually subconsciously, the degree to which the major directions (in this case vertical and horizontal)

A really wet foot painter

DOWN OUR ROAD
SHARON LYNCH

IT WAS A GOOD NAME FOR IT alright, he thought as he trudged through the marshy area, cat tails grabbing at his jacket. His feet were not wet, at least not yet. But then it was doubtful Irwin would notice if they were, as his mind was elsewhere. The cat tails did not succeed in catching his attention either. Instead Irwin was concentrating on the view ahead, looking for just the right distance from that break in the hills, and the best angle between those smooth white birch trees and the jagged rock outcropping.

Irwin was a painter, landscapes mainly. He used his studio for preparation work and finishing details but the major part of his art was created out in the field. He was what is known as a wet foot painter, travelling over, through and around some of the roughest and most beautiful country in Canada. Following in the great tradition of the Group of Seven, Irwin never ceased trying to capture the unique feel and texture of his national homeland.

Now, in his mid-sixties, he had settled down to the glories of a rocky little spot in the middle of Ontario, a place called Haliburton. Robert Bateman had told him about the area decades ago, before Bateman became one of Canada's preeminent figures in the international art world.

Haliburton had been instant love for Irwin, a man now slowing down and not as eager to climb mountains and ford rivers as in his younger days. Haliburton was rugged without being inhospitable. It was wild without being reckless. It was also close enough to the Toronto market to be practical but far enough away that Irwin could turn his back on that particular brand of craziness whenever he chose to, however temporarily that may be.

For when you came right down to it, Irwin was happiest when he was slogging through muck and damp, tramping over leaves, avoiding stumps, always in search of the ultimate subject. Just like every writer wanted to create the great novel, every painter wanted to create the great painting, a little piece of immortality. Wet foot painters thrived on the fresh air, the natural light of the out of doors, the very feel of the land that no studio setting could ever completely duplicate. This raw, spontaneous approach to his work gave Irwin's paintings a vitality that was both refreshing and lacking in pretension.

He did not set out to create such works of art. They just seemed to happen. The first time he had sat down on his little folding stool in front of a small waterfall, he had been amazed at what emerged on his canvas. Irwin was hooked, never to return to his studio for longer than an hour or two at a time.

Over the years he had worn out countless vehicles and even more hiking boots as he traversed every area of the country. He liked to joke that he had been rained, snowed, sleeted and iced upon in all ten provinces and both territories over the years and never caught more than an occasional cold and one case of poison ivy.

But despite respectable sales, he never managed to do much more than pay his expenses. However that aspect of the business never bothered him to any degree since he always had simple tastes and counted good health as his greatest asset. On more than one occasion he had told his friends that he would be worth more dead than alive but they would have a long wait.

Had he been a man of vanity or one who hungered for the smooth luxuries of the world, he would have stayed in the city to become the favourite of critics and well-heeled patrons of the arts. Instead he chose to spend as much time as possible outside the walls of buildings and away from distracting noises and bright, artificial lights. Irwin would rather deal with black flies, rain drops and mud than subways, smog and cocktail parties.

He knew that some day he would have no choice, he would have to restrict himself to sit in a chair and squint out a window at his beloved trees, lake and sky. But he was determined to fight this fate as long as he could. While his feet were still able to move one in front of the other and while his hand was steady enough to hold a brush, he intended to be outside, trying to capture the ever illusive beauty that he saw all around him. If he could only find a completely waterproof pair of boots, he knew he could probably go on forever.

Junior and Senior Redmen score shut-outs against Fenelon Falcons in first of football season's home games on Friday

by PETER DOWNS
Staff Reporter

Both Haliburton Highlands Secondary School Redmen football teams scored 41-0 victories over their Fenelon Falls opponents on Friday in their first home-games of the season.

But while the scores were the same, the senior and junior teams racked up their wins in completely different ways.

The juniors were able to come out scoring early and then coast to a relatively easy win.

The seniors, on the other hand, had to battle hard against their own careless play in the first quarter before they could finally start making ground on the field and on the scoreboard.

"We started with a terrible first quarter with a lot of mental errors, but we sure came back to get things going in the second," said coach Gary Brohman.

After giving away the ball several times through fumbles and interceptions in the scoreless first quarter, Mark Morissette made a key interception that would turn the game in the team's favour, said Brohman.

About eight plays later, Peter Brohman scored his first touchdown of the day. Tim Stouffer then kicked in the convert.

Brohman got the ball again later in the quarter on a pitch-out play from quarterback Kevin Morissette and ran about 70 yards for his second TD.

It was Chris Dobbins' turn next, running the ball in from 20 yards out on another pitch-out.

Morissette opted for a two-point conversion and hit Aaron Tomlinson in the end zone to make the play.

The half ended 27-0 for the Redmen, but there was still a lot of hard work ahead of them in the third quarter.

Strong defensive play from Andrew Sisson, Will Wallace and Jamie Fryer kept the Falcons off the scoreboard, said coach Brohman.

Late in the third, Kevin Morissette passed the ball to Mark Morissette for a five-yard touchdown. Stouffer kicked the ball in for the single point.

Stouffer gave the Redmen their final touchdown on a 60-yard run and followed it up with another one-point conversion.

"We let the whole school out for the games so it was a really exciting day," said Brohman.

The junior Redmen once again unleashed the devastating speed of Mike Bradley on their opponents.

Bradley ran for 282 yards, scored four TDs and kicked five conversions, said coach Bruce Griffith.

The comfortable lead provided by Bradley and his teammates allowed coach Griffith the room give to his quarterback, George Godfrey, the greenlight to work his arm out.

"We call him the man with the golden arm," the coach said. "The only problem is that the receivers can't catch him yet. But once they can, we'll be putting the ball up a lot."

Fullback Darren Mills and tailback Bill Dovell also scored for the Redmen.

Coach Griffith credited the defensive work of Mills and Quenten McCormack for keeping the Falcons off the scoreboard.

The junior and senior Redmen teams will face I.E. Weldon at home this afternoon. The juniors play at 1:30 p.m. and the seniors will follow at about 3:00 p.m.

Field hockey team finishes second in pool at tournament

A steady downpour didn't dampen the enthusiasm of Haliburton high school's girls field hockey team on Saturday, as they finished second in their pool at the annual Sunnybrook tournament in Toronto.

In their first game of the day, the seniors played to a scoreless draw against their counterparts from Brother Andre school. The HHSS Juniors then faced off against the eventual pool winners from St. Mary's, and this very experienced team handed Haliburton its only loss of the day.

The seniors got their offense underway in a game against Assumption Secondary School. Numerous scoring opportunities failed to click, but the pressure paid off for Haliburton when Jess Wallace, supported by the entire forward line, netted what proved to be the game winner.

In the final game of the day the junior squad played a disciplined game, scoring the winning goal on a penalty corner by Amber-Lee Cully. Mandy Harrision earned the three shutouts.

Junior soccer Redmen lose after a hard-fought battle

Last Wednesday, the Redmen Jr. soccer team found themselves travelling to I. E. Weldon in Lindsay, where they were confronted with their toughest foes yet.

The Weldon squad was a well organized, experienced team that controlled the ball and the tempo of the game.

The ever-improving Redmen lacked no enthusiasm but could not match Weldon's experience dropping a hard fought contest 7-0.

All Redmen team members gave 110 percent effort and should be proud of the game they played.

PeeWee Huskies win, tie in busy pre-season action

The National Hockey League may have postponed the start of its season but not the Haliburton OMHA PeeWee Huskies. The PeeWees have been busy gearing up for their season start playing four exhibition games in less than two weeks. They staged a home and home series with the Huntsville Blues and hosted the West Mall Lightning, an "AA" team from Mississauga for two games on Saturday, October 1. The Huskies hammered out a tie and a win against both opponents.

The first game in Huntsville found two evenly matched teams in their first game of the season. The play was scrumbly and ragged on both sides but Greg Luck and Ryan Simioni found the mark for the Huskies to earn a 2-2 tie.

In the return match in Haliburton on Tuesday, September 27, Huntsville jumped to a one-goal lead just 24 seconds into the game. This ignited Huntsville who went on to out-play Haliburton in the first two periods, adding another goal in the first to lead 2-0 at the end of the second. In the third period the Huskies rallied led by a two-goal effort from Allan Pugh. Bobby Hebert and Blayne Saunders assisted on Allan's first and Matt Reid on his second. Danny Koz, a defenceman converted to forward, notched the winner with an assist from Greg Luck.

On Saturday, the Huskies were up against an unknown quantity in the West Mall Lightning. In the first game the two teams played a cautious, even-up game as the Huskies faced some of the players they had skated alongside in Ted's Pals hockey school in the summer. Greg Luck put the Huskies ahead on the only goal of the first period with Mike Morissette drawing an assist. The second period went scoreless. The Lightning scored early in the third period only to have Chris Moynes restore the Huskies lead on a brilliant rush. In the final minute of the game West Mall, on a power play with their goalie pulled, out-manned Haliburton 6 to 4 and with 27 seconds left in the game tied it at 2. Brian Mulholland was sharp in the Huskies net to earn the tie.

The second game was a different story. In the first period the Lightning thundered, outshooting the Huskies 15 to 9 and outscoring them 1 to 0. In the second period, the Lightning added to their lead before the Huskies roared back taking advantage of a five-minute Lightning penalty to score three times. Defenceman, Cole Glendinning, led the charge on a booming shot with help from his partner, Matt Reid.

Thirteen seconds later on a nice passing play from defenceman Devon Dart to Blayne Saunders to Mike Morissette, the Huskies had knotted it at 2. On the following faceoff centre Greg Forgrave moved the puck ahead and Morissette's hustle gave him his second of the game and the Huskies the lead. Before the second ended, Haliburton jumped to a 6-2 lead with Saunders scoring from Forgrave, Greg Luck's big shot finding the twine with an assist from Dart and Morissette completing his hat trick unassisted. In the third period, the two teams were tired as they finished their second game of the afternoon. The play became chippy and the penalty minutes soared as the Huskies added two more and the Lightning, one. Mighty Nick Cochrane with his first goal as a PeeWee and Chris Moynes from Luck and Forgrave completed the 8-3 rout. Adam Wilson stood tall in the Huskie net for the win. Rounding out the Huskies roster is steady defenceman, Jamie Johnston.

Coach Bob Johnston finds the results of the early season encouraging but knows that he and his assistants Paul Morissette, Ted Glendinning and Brian Mulholland have a way to go to shape the team into the winning combination they expect it to be.

New hockey league planned

by STEPHEN SHAW
Staff Reporter

A drop off in registration for the Haliburton Minor Hockey Association has prompted the creation of an in-town, youth house league.

The Youth Sunday Hockey League, under the umbrella of the Minor Hockey Association, hopes to attract up to 40 boys and girls between the ages of 7 and 14.

Organizer Rick Wood, MHA Equipment Manager, said the high costs of travel and equipment during these icy economic times may be behind last year's registration decrease.

"I don't know if it is because of the money but this will give kids who don't have it a chance to still play without having the costs of travelling everywhere."

Wood is aiming for a start-up date of mid-October for the non-competitive league, "but it depends on the type of response we get." He also said plans are in the works to organize an equipment exchange program to help save costs and encourage sign-ups. Registration for the Youth Sunday Hockey League costs $65. For more information call Rick Wood at 457-2475.

The senior Redmen played a strong first half against the wind and capitalized on Weldon's mistakes to take a 3-0 lead. Jonathan Bishop scored on a penalty kick after Jay Corby was hauled down from behind in the penalty area. Then Jay himself tucked the ball neatly in the net

Concerts will hit all the right notes

by PETER DOWNS
Staff Reporter

The Haliburton Highlands Concert Series is set to deliver a diverse range of entertainment this season, including a comedy, classical music and even the odd gypsy song.

Kicking off the series' 15th season on October 16 at 7:30 p.m. is the third and final installment of the one-man comedy Wingfield's Folly. The show, starring Rod Beattie, portrays the trials and tribulations of a Bay Street executive who relocates to the country.

Ted Carson, chairman of the organizing committee behind the series, said the first two parts of the comedy trilogy were presented by the series in past seasons and were a big hit.

This will be the last season Beattie plans to perform the play, he said, so it will be a good chance to take in the final installment.

It isn't necessary to have seen either of the first two segments of the trilogy to be able to follow the action of the play, said Carson.

"It's continuing, but it's not like a soap opera where it's all linked together," he explained.

The second concert in the series is a performance by violinist Ioan Harea on November 13. Originally from Romania, Harea plays a selection of classical songs and traditional Gypsy music.

"He is apparently an absolutely fiery, hair-raising gypsy violinist," said Carson.

The final concert of the series is scheduled for March 5 and is a performance by a relatively new ensemble called the Algonquin Trio. Each of the members of the group, including a pianist, cellist and a violinist, are also associated with the London Symphony.

None of the events were scheduled in December, January or February because organizers are hoping to avoid bad weather during the winter, said Carson. The gap will also leave time for snowbirds to return from warmer climates.

All of the performances will be held at the Royal Canadian Legion Hall in Haliburton.

Season's tickets are priced at $40 for adults and $15 for students. Tickets can be purchased in Haliburton at Rails' End Gallery or Nancy's Flowers and in Minden at the IDA Drug Store.

Single tickets can also be bought at the door for $17, adults, and $10, students.

Further information is available by calling 286-1218 or 286-3756.

New Novices take to the ice

Welcome, moms, dads, grandparents and Huskie fans alike to another exciting season of minor hockey.

This year's Huskie Novice A team consists of some young greenhorns ready to mix it up at the O.M.H.A. level. The only player returning from last year's team is Jamie Sala. Joel Cooper and Jason Chambers join the team from last year's Novice B team. Shawn MacInnes, Joey Sisson, Norm Smith, André Nichol and goalie, Alex Frybort, come from last year's Novice C team. Mathew Manary and Brandon Bowman played last year on the Wilberforce Novice B squad and last, but not least, Ross Gerry, who hails from the 93/94 Haliburton Major Tyke team. Although the team lacks experience they're big on heart and are eager to learn.

Come on out and watch the boys in their home opener against Fenelon Falls, Sunday, October 9 at 3 p.m. Good luck guys!

when the Weldon keeper mishandled the ball and let it slip by. The Redmen led 2-0 at the half.

In the second half, Jim O'Neill caught the Weldon keeper out of position and lofted the ball nicely over his head to score the third goal. Mike Morrison had a chance to ice the game with a penalty kick and placed a hard low shot to the left side. The Weldon keeper, however, made amends for his earlier mistakes and came up with a big save. This seemed to give Weldon the spark they needed and they fought back to regain one goal.

Congratulations to all team members on a fine win, with special mention to Ryan Goodall, Mike Ellis, Brandon Hatfield, Jonathan Bishop and Roberto Guerra who made some key saves.

Winter tourism at stake

be safe at all times."

HFOA member Peter Schleifenbaum, part owner of Haliburton Forest and Wildlife Reserve, agreed with the estimates of the Chamber of Commerce and said he too is "puzzled" by the lack of interest being shown by the community. Only a handful of business owners turned up for a recent Chamber of Commerce meeting in which the issue was discussed. In an interview with the Echo, Schleifenbaum said that "we have done everything in our power to bring this to the attention of the government," and assured local merchants that while owners are still standing firm on their deadline, "we are considering every aspect of how this will affect the community."

On a more optimistic note, he said that the Ontario Ombudsman, an entity independent from government that acts as a middle party between concerned citizens and government, has launched an official investigation in the situation.

Schleifenbaum points out that the tax rebate controversy is no longer just a local issue and that other forest owners in Bancroft and Muskoka have thrown their support behind the cause and promised to close off their lands too.

"This is a problem facing the whole province," he said.
Dysart et al Reeve Curry

Bishop, who owns property that is included in the region's trails and who is a member of the HFOA, said he has not yet decided whether or not he, too, will close off his land. "I haven't made that decision yet and I'm hoping this thing will be resolved before that time comes...it will be a very hard decision to make," he said.

Brian Watts, President of the Haliburton County Snowmobiling Association, said estimates show that snowmobiling alone brings about $16-million into the region's economy, which accounts for 90 per cent of the winter tourism industry. "If that is taken away everybody in Haliburton will be broke. We're talking about 5,000 or 6,000 people who will be unemployed," said Watts, owner of Ingoldsby General Store.

He said that if the closure occurs, "we have contingency plans in place," but raised serious safety concerns if roads and lakes are used as alternatives. "We've talked about marking roads and lakes and opening closed concessions... but we'll have people running their snowmobiles through backyards and parks and roads and lakes that aren't marked and your going to have fatalities."

While he completely backs the forest owners in their fight with the provincial government — "they have to get some kind of compensation" — he believes that with the NDP government coming to the end of its mandate, forest owners are "flogging a dead horse." "We've supported them right from the onslaught and we will still support them because we believe in their cause. But I don't believe in the way this is all happening and the way the county is being held for ransom."

"No matter what happens there isn't going to be a political solution (until after the next election) so we should sit down and come up with some kind of deal for now to keep the trails open because it is unfair to the community," Watts said.

Victoria - Haliburton MPP Chris Hodgson is remaining optimistic that some form of a solution can be reached prior to the deadline. "I've talked to most of the players and Minister of Natural Resources Howard Hampton told me he expected to have a solution by the fall...I'm hopeful some resolution will be reached and we can avert this."

Minden OPP's seatbelt crackdown pays off

by PETER DOWNS
Staff Reporter

The Minden detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police pulled over 950 vehicles and laid seat belt charges against 11 people on the first weekend of its seat belt enforcement campaign, Operation Impact.

Detachments around the province launched the enforcement initiative on Saturday and will be nabbing drivers who refuse to buckle up through October 14.

"That's all. That's not bad," said Community Services Officer

Michael Landry of the small number of people in Haliburton County charged for not wearing seat belts.

"Most of the people had heard about (Operation Impact) on the radio or read about it in the papers," he said. "It received a lot of coverage."

Elderly residents cautioned about sales tactics

Two young males, driving a very dull red pickup with ladders possibly along the back are going around soliciting work from seniors and are charging enormous amounts of money.

If you have someone attend

As a result of the seat belt enforcement initiative, officers laid several other charges against drivers who didn't have their licences or insurance papers with them when they were pulled over, said Constable Landry.

The fine for not wearing a seat belt is $90 and two demerit points.

Forestry, tourism hand in hand

Two industries play an equal role in economy, new report shows

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

Forestry and tourism are equal players in the economy of Haliburton County, says a report released on Friday night.

"Being 'hewers of wood' is still important," says Gary Bull, who spent two months compiling information for his report, a "Socio-Economic Profile of the Major Primary and Service Industries in the County of Haliburton."

His data shows that far from being in decline, forestry is an essential contributor to the county's economic health. Tourism may be more visible but when it comes to generating income and providing jobs, forestry can no longer be overlooked.

This is even more true, he says, when you consider tourism's dependence on forests. The prime attraction of the Highlands are its lakes and forests, upon which tourism, recreational opportunities and cottaging rely. Without the forests, tourism would be greatly diminished.

Bull was hired by the Haliburton County Forest Land Task Force to determine forestry's role in the county's economy. One goal of the task force is to convince the provincial government to reinstate the Managed Forest Tax Rebate Program or introduce a fairer method of taxing forest land. The task force, which represents the interests of forest owners and the local private forestry industry, felt it needed current statistics to prove to the government what it has believed all along - forests are everyone's investment.

Without tax concessions, the forest owners say they will have to cut down more trees than is wise in order to pay their property taxes, which have been increasing 10% a year. The Haliburton Forest Owners Association is also threatening to block access to their land on November 1 if the province doesn't act. This would put snowmobiling and cross country skiing in jeopardy. (See story elsewhere in the Echo.)

Bull's report was presented Friday night at the Wigamog Inn where the Ontario Forestry Association was holding a week-end conference.

Bull's job was difficult for two reasons: the Task Force could afford to hire him for only two months; and there is little statistical data. The biggest gap was in knowledge about the economic impact of cottagers, who make up two-thirds of the county's population.

However, he gathered government data and interviewed several local stakeholders and came up with the following estimates.

- Tourism Recreation
 - cross country skiers spend about $2-million a year in the Highlands
 - snowmobilers spend up to $22-million a season and they also buy about $7-million in merchandise
 - between $16-million and $22-million is spent each year on accommodation and food
 - campers spend $1-million a year
 - hunters spend between $4.8- and $6.8-million a year
 - fishermen spend about $9-million in the Highlands
 - trappers spend between $120,000 and $200,000 a year
 - golfers spend almost $4-million and buy equipment worth $880,000
 - it is not known how much cottagers spend and buy

- Wood Products
 - logging sales are between $6.7- and $7.3-million a year
 - processing expenditures (mills) are between $17.8- and $22-million a year
 - and firewood sales are about $4-million a year

One normally wouldn't expect to find such diversification so close to Toronto, Bull says, but in Haliburton County, employment is still very seasonal and many people rely on both forestry and tourism for their income. "In fact, the county seems well positioned, in terms of economic diversity, to prepare for a sustainable future."

Yet because most forestry takes place behind the scenes, people do not realize its importance. A study commissioned by the county a few years ago even predicted a decline in forestry - a decline that Bull says is far from taking place.

"The wood products industry needs the encouragement of the community and to work with the community to sustain a viable industry for the future. These people shouldn't be ignored."

"We're really hoping that what we have done will be a catalyst so people can change their attitudes (about the importance of forestry)," says task force chairman Godfrey Tyler. "This is a real issue in this county and we wanted to create real information about forestry. If forestry is dead, why are forest owners so upset?"

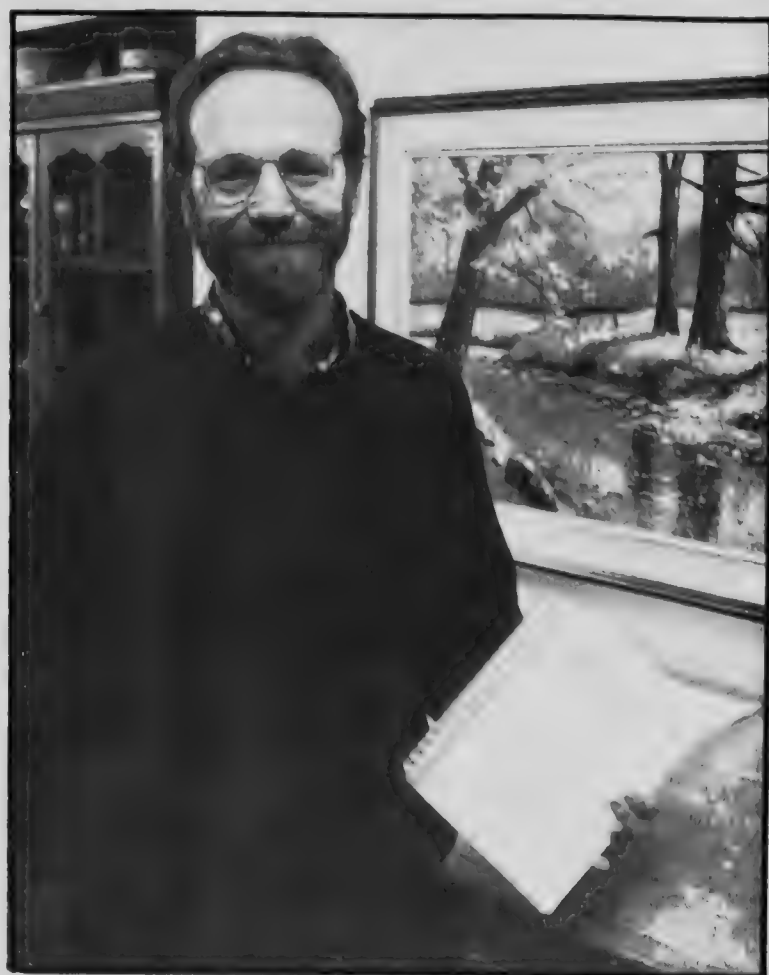

"These types of reports are the bullets that win the wars in public policy," said fellow task force member Brent Devolin, who would like to remind governments of the revenues they would be losing from provincial sales tax and GST if forestry declines.

Bull also pointed out what would happen if forest owners turned to clear-cutting to generate more income from their property.

Clear-cutting's initial financial gain is very obvious - forest owners can make a lot more money simply by cutting down all their trees at once rather than selectively cutting both mature and weak trees. However, by following sustainable cutting practices, the yield from the forest will be much higher over a 50-year period and forest owners would make more than double the revenue.

"It's better for securing the future of the community for the landowners to make some sacrifices and manage the forests in a sustainable way," Bull says. There are four major benefits:

- there's a steadier base of employment and mills can invest because they know what the wood supply will be
- there's the possibility of adding many more value-added products (doing something with the wood rather than shipping it away to have other people turn it

"The wood products industry needs the encouragement of the community to sustain a viable industry for the future," says Gary Bull, who presented his report on the economical importance of the county's forests on Friday night at Wigamog

Students test below provincial averages

by PETER DOWNS
Staff Reporter

Results from tests given to Grade 9 students across the province last year indicate students from Haliburton Highlands Secondary School are reading and writing at levels below the provincial average.

And the Haliburton County Board of Education's superintendent of education, Dale Robinson, is placing the blame on the school system.

"This shows us some shortfalls in our teaching methods and the way we're doing things," he told board members at a meeting last week. "I'm not happy with this result."

Robinson said he is "far less pleased" with the students' writing results than he is with their reading marks.

Compared to the provincial average for writing, which places seven per cent of the Grade 9 students below their grade level, 12 per cent of Grade 9 students from HHSS recorded scores below grade level.

According to the results, 87 per cent of the 150 HHSS Grade 9s who took the writing tests were writing at grade level. Twelve per cent of the students were writing below grade level, while only one per cent were above.

The provincial average shows that 90 per cent of Ontario's Grade 9 students tested last year were writing at grade level, seven per cent were below average and three per cent were above.

HHSS students fared much better in the reading tests, coming in just below the provincial average for those reading beneath their grade level.

Of the 158 HHSS students tested, 89 per cent were reading at a Grade 9 level and 11 per cent were below. None of them recorded marks higher than grade level.

Provincially, 88 per cent of the Grade 9 students tested were reading at their grade level, 10 per cent were below grade level and two per cent were above.

The writing tests asked students to display more than their knowledge of the mechanics of writing, said Robinson. They also tested the students' abilities to develop and support an argument and to express thoughts and feelings on a personal level.

This is where some of the HHSS students ran in to difficulty, Robinson said.

"I'm not looking for excuses at all," he said. "We're going to improve this. I guarantee we're going to improve this."

Wendy Ladurantaye, who chairs the board's education committee, said in a later interview that she wants to find out more about the tests before she makes any judgements about the results.

She also said she is interested in finding out how far students who scored below grade level are behind. "Were they way below or only a few months behind?"

"But if this is the case and our kids aren't up to snuff," she said, "then, yes, I'm not happy with the results, and something should be done about it."

All Grade 9 students were required to take the tests, including those who have been identified by the board as having learning difficulties.

This won't hurt a bit...

Public health nurse Anne Creelman gives Cole Glendinning a vaccination for Hepatitis B, a sometimes fatal liver disease that can be spread through the exchange of bodily fluids. The Health Unit is giving free vaccinations to all Grade 7 students in the county, providing that parents sign a consent form and return it this week to the school. The program is voluntary and requires a series of three needles, which will be given at the schools. The vaccination is free.

Vaccinations for Hepatitis B now available

by STEPHEN SHAW
Staff Reporter

The Ministry of Health is launching a voluntary vaccination program to protect students against the dangers of hepatitis B, a deadly disease which afflicts more than 300 people each year in Ontario.

The program consists of three injections during the school year and is free for all Grade 7 students. Parents wishing to have their child protected must fill out and return to the school a consent form within one week.

The protection program is being carried out at the school by the Haliburton, Kawartha, Pine Ridge District Health Unit. Only Grade 7 students will be vaccinated but parents can ask their doctor about vaccination for older students. However, the cost for the vaccine is quite high.

Hepatitis B is caused by a virus and attacks the liver, sometimes causing permanent damage and even death.

School smokers facing stiffer rules this fall

by PETER DOWNS
Staff Reporter

Teachers, students and school staff hankering for a smoke will soon likely have to control their cravings for the school day or go off property to light up.

A new piece of legislation expected to be passed by the Ontario government this fall will ban smoking completely on all school properties across the province.

That shouldn't create a big change for many at Haliburton County's schools, which are already smoke-free inside, but it could mean the return of high school students taking butt breaks down by the train. That's a problem the school board thought it had finally dealt with a couple years ago, said Wally Bunn, chairman of the board's management committee.

The board had previously decided to disallow smoking on school property at Haliburton Highlands Secondary School, he explained. Student smokers then began to congregate at the front of the school, but just off property, in front of the train.

Complaints that clusters of students puffing away on cigarettes beside the main road into the village were an unattractive sight soon began to filter in to the offices of the board and the high school.

"People didn't like the look of it," said Bunn.

As a result, the board designated a small area behind the school as its smoking area. Smoking anywhere else on school property, inside or out, is against the rules.

But once the proposed smoke-free schools law takes effect, this last refuge for high school smokers will also be off limits.

HHSS principal Gary Brohman fears this could lead to students once again improvising their own smoking sections in front of the school.

"They'll either cross the street or go in front of the train," he said. "That would be a nice sight, wouldn't it, as you're coming up Highway 121?"

And at least two students who frequent the school's smoking area say kids will probably continue to smoke just as much as they do now, no matter whether its on or off school grounds.

"I think everyone's going to be smoking behind trees or off property or wherever they can," said Grade 11 student Adam Dunn. "... I don't think anyone would go a whole day without smoking."

"There are so many people who smoke at this school that it will cause a lot of problems," said Brad Barrick, also in Grade 11.

But the proposed legislation won't be much of a problem for J.D. Hodgson Elementary School.

Principal McKay Brydon says the staff at his school is already virtually smoke-free.

"The only person I'm aware of who smokes at the school is one custodian, and he smokes in his car," said Brydon.

Soon, the custodian won't even be able to do that.

Creating safe haven for women and children new appointee's goal

Susan Wilson has been appointed Community Liaison Worker for the Women's Emergency House. The announcement was made last week by Gena Robertson, Executive Director of SIRCH.

Wilson brings to the job a wide range of experience in communications, fund-raising, and administration. She is well known to the community through her work as a writer and editor at The Minden Times, where she was responsible for the paper's summer supplement from 1988 to 1993. Wilson is also spearheading the efforts of a team of volunteers to get access to the TVOntario signal for the Highlands and is a member of the Minden Sled Dog Derby committee and the Messiah Choir.

The Women's Emergency House will be a safe place here in the county where women and their children seeking to leave abusive relationships can go for a week or two while they decide what steps to take next. At present, women in this situation who have no place else to go must leave the county. Frequently, this is not an option (because, for instance, the children are in school) and so the women stay in a dangerous domestic environment.

Wilson's role will be to build on the community support for the house already generated by Jude King, Project Facilitator for the past year. "The level of support in the community for the Women's Emergency House is quite impressive," Wilson said. "My job will be to sustain and enhance that broad-based commitment, to make sure everybody knows how much everybody else believes in this project, and to help people find practical ways to express their support."

Robertson and Wilson both gave great credit to King for the work she has already done. King is currently on maternity leave; she will be returning to the Emergency House project next spring to train volunteers.

need to be softened. In this photograph, to relieve the boredom of a grid pattern, one leaf stem cuts across on a gentle diagonal and the line is continued by the black edge of the folded leaf. Other minor stems and distant branches also gently soften and make more natural the strong verticality of the composition.

Now it becomes obvious. All of the directional information in the composition is in stark black, the more dominant lines being vertical and horizontal, whereas the actual image that we first see, the leaves and the blurred background of the branches of distant trees, are in shades of grey. The black gives this photograph its compositional unity.

Then the tiny specks of white, the jagged tears in a few of the leaves that proclaim the dying of the season, create secondary focal points.

The location of the main image is another artistic choice that is made either to enhance stillness or to emphasize movement within the picture. Centrality accentuates stillness. This image is a quiet one, being centred but again not rigidly so.

To think that any photographer or painter actually consciously makes these many decisions is probably erroneous. Years of looking, of practice, of study even, enables most mature artists to almost instinctively choose "formal" aspects that will assist in creating their desired effects. Often I find it useful when looking at a work of art to attempt, in my mind's eye, to re-arrange the parts of the composition and to try to visualize the effect.

In this work take away the tree trunk. Now there is a branch floating in air, perhaps it remains still but would be more unstable even though in reality this branch is not actually attached to the trunk behind.

Then make the tree trunk wider. Now that aspect could overwhelm. Set three or four more leaves on the branch. Does this create a clutter, too much in the frame to give any lasting image? Bring the background into focus. That would overpower the simple image of autumn that confronts the viewer.

Just by asking a few such questions of any work of art that tends to linger in my memory humbles me. It all looks so easy once one has got the technique, but the instinctive artistic decisions that come into play are quite beyond technique.

Thank you, Len.

Board of Education grills builders vying for J.D. Hodgson contract

by PETER DOWNS
Staff Reporter

Architects called by the Haliburton County Board of Education to present proposals for additions at the high school and J. Douglas Hodgson Elementary School gave board members all kinds of ideas last week.

However, they weren't quite so giving when it came to their fees.

The board's management committee had scheduled a special meeting on Wednesday night to interview four architectural firms for its two school expansion projects.

Committee members were hoping to pass a resolution that night, recommending to the board that one of the firms be awarded the contract.

But before it can make that recommendation, the committee will need more information, said chairman Wally Bunn.

"They didn't really come across with their fees," he said.

Superintendent of Business Administration Jim Bradley has been directed to get in touch with each of the firms and peg them down on their fee structures, said Bunn.

The committee will then have to organize another special meeting so that it can have a recommendation in place for the board's next meeting, October 25.

According to the board's tentative timetable, preliminary planning of the additions is to be completed by the end of December. The plans are to be reviewed and approved by the Ministry of Education by the end of 1995 and construction is slated for completion by December 1996.

The four architecture firms on the board's short list include Allen and Sherriff, who handled the expansion at Archie Stouffer Elementary School, Moffet and Duncan, Stewart Smith and W.M. Salter and Associates.

Board members and trustees questioned each of the firms regarding the safety checks they put in place to make certain the general contractors they hire are financially sound.

The contractor working on the Archie Stouffer addition went into receivership and the work had to be carried out under a bond, which slowed down the completion of the addition, said Dysart trustee Tim Casey.

Members of the board were also interested to know how each of the firms would use the local economy, how they would confront the costly problem of asbestos removal and how often the architect in charge of the projects would be on site.

None of the firms revealed detailed drawings for either school addition, but each said the high school would present the greatest challenge and would be the most expensive to expand.

The province has already approved partial funding for the additions, approximately $1.82-million, which is to be advanced to the board during the 1996-1997 school year.

The board's share of the total cost of the additions will at least match the government's funding, bringing the total price-tag of the projects to an estimated $3.65-million.

Any additional building costs would have to be covered by the board and would not qualify for government funding.

MNR's five-year timber plan made public

by STEPHEN SHAW
Staff Reporter

An outline of the Ministry of Natural Resources' five-year Timber Management Plan was unveiled to the public at an open house Sept. 24th, ushering in a new era of community and government co-operation.

The new plan, which won't be finalized until the spring of 1996, is being created for the first time with the consultation and input of the public as well as industry users.

The open house drew about 40 people, many of whom comprise the recently formed Local Citizen's Advisory Group (LCAG), which is made up of 11 representatives from affected user groups.

"The purpose of the open house was to expose the forest plans for the next five years and to get the public's input on something that may have been overlooked or that they might disagree on," said the MNR's Peter Hynard adding "they seemed very accepting and supportive of what we are doing."

Tom McMullen, a member of the Haliburton Field Naturalists who sits on the LCAG, said he was "overall very, very pleased with the approach of the MNR."

"They couldn't be doing a better job to meet the needs and concerns of all user groups," said McMullen who took a tour through a logging area with Hynard and was "quite impressed" with the environmental consideration taken into account at each step of the process.

While the LCAG was for the most part supportive of the proposal outline, there was however one concern raised regarding the condition of roads left behind by the loggers. But, said McMullen, "we recognize that some logging has to take place."

Changes to the new plan, said Hynard, include working closely with the public to meet people's needs and concerns, aiming to balance the province's spending and revenues and compensating for the recent decrease of hardwood caused by defoliation and the droughts during the 1980s.

Hynard was unable to give the actual percentage of lost hardwood, but said "it will be reduced enough so it will be felt. The droughts of the '80s and defoliation caused a tremendous loss of trees and as a result our hardwood is down."

"We will try to offset this loss by increasing the amount of pine cut but pine doesn't contain the same amount of fuel wood," he continued. "It will help to some degree but it won't be a substitute."

The basis for the plan, which is rewritten every five years, is to outline how much wood can be cut without exceeding the amount being grown, and where and how it will be cut.

It also identifies all human and environmental aspects that may be affected by the logging and how to best protect those interests, as well as prescribing how to restore the lost trees, Hynard said.

Also playing a vital role in the new plan, Hynard said, is the MNR's goal of balancing government revenues and expenditures. "Because of the financial climate we can't afford to spend more than we bring in anymore and that was never a factor before," he said. "We don't want to spend money on a project that isn't going to be financially successful so we are going to have to be more cost-effective."

MPP Chris Hodgson, the Conservatives' Ministry of Natural Resources critic, attended the open house and was satisfied with the approach taken by the MNR.

Hodgson to represent Conservatives again

On Wednesday, MPP Chris Hodgson reaffirmed his commitment to the people of Victoria-Haliburton by accepting the candidacy for the Ontario P.C. Party and agreeing to run in the next provincial election. The nomination meeting was held at Ridgewood Public School in Cobocok and was attended by a large crowd.

In his acceptance speech, Hodgson talked about his accomplishments in his first six months as an M.P.P., but added that much more still needs to be done if we are to get this province back on track.

He told the assembled crowd that he would continue advancing the concerns of rural Ontarians. "I am fully committed to the grassroots approach that our leader, Mike Harris, is taking," said Hodgson. "We could stand around and point fingers, but instead we've chosen to work constructively. We're not doing anyone any favours by running the other parties down just for our own political gain. We've got to earn every point we get in the polls and every seat we win in the next election."

In addition to the 3000 cases that he and his staff have dealt with in the past six months, Hodgson says he has also been an advocate in the Legislature for the people of Victoria-Haliburton. "I have voiced my constituents' concerns on numerous issues including health care, municipal planning reform, long term care, waste disposal, and child abuse."

One issue is his stand against the inappropriate use of gun control as a means of crime control. "I've been fighting for the rights of farmers, hunters, Olympic athletes and gun collectors who are being used by our governments as scapegoats in the name of crime control. The FAC Resolution that I passed on May 4 to "grandfather" existing firearms owners from further courses and exams is now Party policy."

Schools feeling a space squeeze

by PETER DOWNS
Staff Reporter

The following are brief reports of items discussed at Tuesday night's meeting of the Haliburton County Board of Education.

Enrolment rising

Enrolment figures at the county's schools have risen sharply over the past five years, placing a strain on staff at some schools, Director of Education Brad Saunders told board members.

According to preliminary figures compiled by the board, there are 2,469 full- and part-time students enrolled at the board's eight schools. This figure represents a jump of approximately 15 per cent over the number of kids registered at the schools by the end of September 1990.

At a time when the board has seen its list of teachers reduced by the social contract and its funding chopped by the province, any increase in enrolment cannot happen "without feeling a certain amount of pain," said Saunders.

He cited the example of Gooderham Public School and Dorset Public School. Each school has approximately the same number of kids and four teachers. However, there is a relatively high number of "high-needs" children at Gooderham, he said, which places a large strain on the teachers there.

But it hasn't only been teaching staff who have felt the pinch of rising enrolment, said Saunders.

At Dorset, the number of students has risen significantly

BOARD OF EDUCATION

Management Committee

over the past three years, yet the number of secretaries has remained the same. And at Archie Stouffer Elementary School, where the square footage of the building has been greatly expanded, the janitorial staff has not been increased.

Superintendent of Business Administration Jim Bradley said rising enrolment has also had an impact on the board's busing.

Buses contracted by the board are currently running at or near capacity, he said. The situation will probably become even tighter as winter comes and children who bicycle to school or are driven by parents revert to the bus.

Bradley stressed that the board will not operate its buses over legal capacity under any circumstances.

While climbing enrolment has created pressure, Saunders said the school system has coped well with it on the whole.

Debenture

During a closed-door session part way through the meeting, members of the board approved a $5-million debenture to cover the costs of the recently completed addition at Archie Stouffer Elementary School and the new roof at Haliburton Highlands Secondary School.

The debenture will be repaid over a 20-year amortization period and has to be refinanced after 10 years, said Bradley.

Before the board closed its doors to discuss the financing, John Hughes, vice-president of the financial firm handling the deal, said he had "no qualms" about seeking the debenture at this time, based on the strength of the board's financial position and the economy of the county.

Director of Education Brad Saunders raised the option of the board paying back the $5-million over a 10-year period, refinancing it after five years, rather than the 20-year amortization.

Hughes, however, maintained that a longer period of repayment would enable the board to place more funds in a reserve account during the first 10 years of the deal to put toward the balance remaining on the final 10-year term. Overall, he said, this approach would save the board some money.

Sherborne trustee John Munro said he felt more comfortable with the longer plan because it gives the board more leeway and is a more realistic time-frame for repayment.

Lucky strike

A bolt of lightning that hit a tree beside the high school last Monday and knocked out the school's public address system for a few days could have been a lot worse, said Bradley.

Two HHSS custodians who were outside at the time it struck were narrowly missed by the lightning.

"It was quite dramatic for a couple of people," he said.

The bolt of lightning split a large spruce tree adjacent to the school, blowing out its PA system and three phones.

Principal qualifies

The board received a letter from the Faculty of Education at Queen's University, notifying it that Gooderham Public School principal Ruth Lewis had received her principal's qualifications.

Saunders pointed out that all of the board's principals now hold the qualification.

Leaders

Will Wallace and Stacey Bunn from the high school were scheduled to tell members of the board about their experiences at the Ontario Leadership Centre this past summer.

However, Bunn was unable to make the meeting because of a field hockey game, so Wallace had the floor to himself.

The two students were chosen to attend one-week leadership camps at the centre by teachers at the high school, said principal Gary Brohman.

"We're really proud to have young people like this to represent our school and our county," he told the board.

The primary goal of the camp is to teach students leadership skills through athletics, said Wallace, who described the experience as one of the best weeks of his life.

Aside from building his confidence level and improving his leadership qualities, Wallace said he was also able to establish friendships with people from all walks of life and cultures.

"It really helped you learn about life," he said. "I certainly hope that some of the other students will be able to go to the camp because it really was a great experience."

Hannu Halminen took Ray Oliver for a ride in his Harvard Mark IV

Stanhope fly-in turns into a two-day event for pilots

by PETER DOWNS
Staff Reporter

Bad weather in the southern regions of the province Saturday forced Stanhope Airport to stretch its annual fall fly-in into a two-day event.

Airport manager Mike Carey decided to extend the event so that those grounded by rain in the south could take to the skies on Sunday and get together with others from across Ontario who share their aeronautical interests.

The event drew 25 planes on Saturday and 26 on Sunday, said Carey.

Gary Lopes of Toronto got a head start on Saturday's bad flying conditions by taking off for the fly-in a day early.

"When we left Toronto it was raining and overcast, but as soon as we passed Lindsay it was just beautiful," he said.

This was the first time that Lopes and his wife have taken part in any of the airport's fly-ins.

Orville Bondarenko was another first-timer at the event. He flew in from Rosseau in a two-seater float plane he built himself.

"The flight was a little bumpy," he said. "I had a head wind the whole way."

Bondarenko landed his plane on Maple Lake and was picked up by car and brought to the airport, where flyers could fill themselves up on pancakes and coffee.

Hannu Halminen, who lives in Courtice, Ont. and has a cottage on Eagle Lake, buzzed the airport in his 1952 Harvard Mark IV, laying down a swath of smoke in his wake.

Only 555 of the Mark IVs were ever built, said Halminen, who had two on display at the fly-in. Constructed just outside of Thunderbay in Fort William, the bright yellow, prop planes were used as trainers for the U.S. air force during the Korean War.

Halminen said he has been flying in this area for 20 years and has been taking part in airport's fly-ins ever since he became a member of Stanhope's flying club four or five years ago.

TIME STANDS STILL

Old friends gather to share memories and a friendly repast

by PETER DOWNS
Staff Reporter

ELVA COOPER LIVES on the Guilford farm next door to the log house where she was born in 1900.

Everett Paull, 87, and his 85-year-old wife, Phoebe, live not too far away on Kennisis Lake Rd. They were also born and raised in Guilford.

Blanch Barry, 85, lives on Airport Road, near-by Della Barry, also 85, who is in West Guilford. The two women's husbands were first cousins.

And 87-year-old Charlie Sawyers and his wife Betty, who owned and operated the Lochaven Inn for 35 years, are just a few miles away on North Shore Road in Stanhope.

The only problem is that none of these friends, who grew up in the same area and still live so close to each other, have been able to get together as a group in a long, long time.

Age has made it difficult for some the group to visit, but it hasn't lessened their friendship.

Charlotte Ruttan decided to do something about the situation. She organized a dinner at her North Shore Road home to give her elder friends an opportunity to share each other's company and catch up on what is going on in their lives. They also had a chance to talk over old times.

They spoke of the days long before the region was opened up by cars and highways, when horses and buggies and sleighs and cutters were the way to get around.

"I saw the first car that came into the county in about 1913," said Blanch Barry, who grew up in Haliburton but moved to Guilford in 1945.

Mrs. Barry is the last surviving daughter of Haliburton's "Grand Old Man," William Gregory, who lived to be 104.

"They called him that because he lived so long and didn't have any enemies," said Mrs. Barry. "He was everybody's friend."

The friends also remember having to get up at four or five in the morning to catch the train on special occasions when they would go in to Lindsay.

There was also the night when one of the horses in the team being driven by Mrs. Cooper's husband fell into a well out by the Irish Line. The well hadn't been covered properly and there was a terrible snow storm.

After a bit of discussion, the friends decide the night must've been more than 50 years ago.

"But they never did get the horse out of there. She died there," Mrs. Cooper says, going over the night they all hold in their memories.

The friends talk about the schools they went to. Della Barry went to the Maple Lake school, which is now long gone. Mrs. Paull went to Guilford. And Blanch Barry took classes in the two small schoolhouses behind Victoria Street School before it was built.

Mr. Paull, the joker among the bunch, says, "The only education I ever got was the day I fell off the school roof."

Mrs. Cooper remembers with great clarity the day she had to go to Minden to write her high school entrance examination.

"I nearly failed because I was so nervous," she said. "I was so shy then. I was afraid of everybody."

Her friends all remember Mrs. Cooper as a frail girl who was often sick in her younger days. But at the age of 94, after raising seven children, including twins, she is still going strong.

"I didn't know I was having the twins until I went under the anesthetic," she said. "I heard the doctor say, 'I hear two heart beats.'"

And the conversations continue on through the afternoon until it is time for these old friends to sit together again around the dinner table.

Though it is difficult for these friends to see each other as a group, they were brought together at a recent dinner hosted by Charlotte Ruttan (front, right). The friends include Blanche Barry, Elva Cooper, Della Barry, Phoebe and Everett Paull and Betty and Charlie Sawyers.

Frozen meals program offers culinary delights

For those who are unable to cook their own food, Meals on Wheels is not only a convenient service but a lifeline to the outside world

by STEPHEN SHAW
Staff Reporter

It may only be a frozen dinner, but don't tell that to the 43 clients who rely on the Meals on Wheels program.

The frozen food service, launched two years ago to give those who depend on the program the flexibility of eating when they chose, offers a wide selection of high quality culinary delights specifically made to meet each customer's dietary restrictions.

The food is pre-cooked by Toronto-based Premium Recipe and delivered through Haliburton County Home Support Services. Marilyn Pennycook, Support Services Coordinator, promises the food is low-fat, low-salt, or additives and sodium-free as requested. "These aren't your basic T.V. dinners. These are nutritionally balanced meals."

And if the smile and twinkle in the eyes of 89 year-old Mary Cassidy as her weekly delivery is made is any indication, the proof is in the pudding. Literally.

Prior to March, when she began using the Meals on Wheels frozen food service, Cassidy's weight had dropped from 150 lbs to 103 lbs, she said. Since then, however, the self-confessed "fussy eater" has put back on almost 10 lbs, feasting from a wide selection of gourmet cooked meals each week.

Traveling year-round to remote areas of the region through sometimes brutal weather conditions, convenor Wendy Wilkins, a full-time bookkeeper at the Staanworth Housing Apartments in Minden, devotes each Thursday afternoon to delivering the pre-ordered food.

"The people we are servicing are very friendly. It's a service that makes people smile," she says as she loads her brown Jeep Cherokee for a route that will soon take her from Haliburton to Kinmount, Dorset and Minden.

Because many of the program's clients can't make it to the grocery store or manage to prepare their own foods for various reasons, Wilkins realizes the importance of her role. "Some of these people don't get out very much so part of the great thing about it is the human contact."

At $4.50 a meal, the frozen food service's popularity has "really taken off during the last two years" said Pennycook. "It lets people eat whenever they feel like it so they don't have to rush to eat it right away like a hot meal and also so they can stock up with orders to keep in the freezer."

The orders are placed by clients to the program's centre at the Echo Hills Legion Apartments, where they are then stored until delivery day.

Scottish-born Cassidy, who spent an illustrious life as a cook for many prominent Canadians, such as the family of Lt. Gov. Hal Jackman and Lady Eaton to name just a couple, gives her official taste of approval to the program's meals. Favouring the pot roast, veal cutlet and baked ham, she says the food "is just as good as I could cook." Spoken like a true chef, she adds, "of course they don't spice it like I do."

CULINARY CARE: Mary Cassidy, 89, is one of 43 clients who rely on the special weekly deliveries of Meals on Wheels' Wendy Wilkins.

COOKING FOR A CAUSE

C.H.A.C.E. Inc. executive director Sue Valm helps Dave Honderich, owner of Dave's on 35, cook for the lunch crowd on Saturday. Dave's donated a portion of the sale of each burger between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. to C.H.A.C.E. The agency also raised funds to provide programs for local families through a giant yard sale outside the restaurant and a raffle.

Marshal Rick wants YOU to fight WWII all over again

by PETER DOWNS
Staff Reporter

RICK RICHARDS POINTS to a tiny model aircraft carrier, no bigger than the half-finished cigarette he holds between his fingers.

There are 50 war planes aboard the ship, he says. Each is smaller than a single Rice Krispie.

"Every one of those planes had to be glued on there individually," he explains, and it is clear from the satisfied expression on his face that he must've enjoyed every minute of the construction process.

All in all, Richards, or Marshal Rick as he likes to be called when discussing the war game he has developed over the past five years, has had to either assemble or hand paint close to 2,000 miniature tanks, submarines, bombers and other pieces of military equipment.

But it's all part of the game.

And it's the game that fuels Marshal Rick's interest in all things military and tests the limits of his battle strategy.

"I grew up on military history," said Richards. "I was born in 1935 in Halifax, so I used to sit there and watch all the ships going out of the harbour and off to the war."

A former sergeant in the Canadian army, the Minden resident served overseas in the Korean War and later in the Congo. His father fought in the First World War and his son is a former paratrooper.

"We're a military family going back hundreds of years," he said.

One of his relatives, his great, great grandfather's uncle, fought in the Battle of Waterloo and is buried at Westminster Abbey.

Richards first became interested in war games by playing the board game Risk. He then moved on to Axis and Allies, what he describes as an "upgraded" version of Risk, which has more rules and a heightened level of competition.

But he gradually began to detect what he felt were inadequacies in the game.

"In Axis and Allies, everyone fights over Europe, and the United States sits off to the side, getting more and more powerful, so they always win," he said.

Dissatisfied with this kind of lopsided battle, Richards began to change the game slightly.

Then he changed it a bit more.

He bought two additional Axis and Allies games to combine with the one he already had. This allowed him to increase the size of some countries' fighting forces.

Then he bought another war board game, Fortress America, and mixed the troops and military equipment with his existing arsenals.

He began modifying some of the pieces. Repainting them. Transferring them from one power to another. And in the process, he started to change the history of the Second World War to make the game more competitive.

In Marshal Rick's game, Churchill is defeated and the Second World War does not break out until August of 1942. In Marshal Rick's game, there is no Pearl Harbour. And in Marshal Rick's game, sympathizers are forced to join the front lines of battle.

"I took the sympathizers and gave them to the countries they belong to," he explains. "For example, Turkey was not in the war, but they were Nazi sympathizers. I put them in the war."

The rules of Marshal Rick's game are carefully recorded in his own tiny, intensely neat printing and take up a full eight pages. The rule book, however, is continually growing. As players encounter new situations in the heat of battle, new rules are invented and old rules are amended. The game is always evolving.

The length of each game, or war, depends on the number of players involved and their knowledge of military tactics.

"It depends on how coniving you get," said Richards.

An average game should take two players anywhere between 20 and 30 hours. Usually the game is spread out over several days of battle in two or three hour sessions.

Richards, who moved to the area with his wife last year from Midland, is looking for competitors. He plays regularly with one friend from Minden, but would like to get more people involved.

"It's a game that should really be played with four to eight players because of the number of manoeuvres that need to be made," he said.

A keen mind for strategy and a competitive spirit are all that players need to bring to the war table. Marshal Rick has the rest. New recruits can give him a call at 286-6038.

"I grew up on military history," says Minden resident Rick Richards, who has created a new military board game by piecing together existing ones. "I was born in 1935 in Halifax, so I used to sit there and watch all the ships go out of the harbour and off to the war."

Beautiful weather provides good excuse for a bus ride

Senior League Winnifred Barnum - 286-2140

This has been a beautiful week and we were able to do so many activities.

Sunday, Barb Fawcett was here to play the piano for the afternoon. Sunday was quiet until chapel service in the evening. The service was taken by Rev. John Burgess and the music was played by Lorna Roland.

Monday, Linda led us in a game "solving problems". We would soon solve the woes of the world if we were given the chance, or make them worse!

Tuesday, the chapel service was conducted by Pastor Fast. Jean Cox was the organist. Pastor Fast brought us a very comforting message. After chapel there was a meeting of the pastoral advisory committee in the chapel. My dear friends, Evelyn and Lloyd Coleman, took me out to lunch after the meeting.

In the afternoon there was crafts. Corinne and Pearl managed our card games in the evening.

Wednesday was a banner day for us. We got up and ready to take a bus trip to the Red Umbrella Inn for a delicious luncheon. There were 24 residents and volunteers. Mr. and Mrs. Tustin came out to greet us and guide us to our seats that overlooked beautiful Twelve Mile Lake. When we finished our very tasty lunch, we were invited to sit in the games room. Some played shuffleboard and we had a sing-song with Doris on the piano. We then loaded the bus for our trip home. The residents heartily thank our host and hostess and helpers for a delightful afternoon. Thank you Dottie for the ice cream treat. It seems the bus cannot get by Kawartha Dairy without going in. Many thanks to the volunteers who assisted us - Dottie Muirhead, Jean Robson, and John Thomas, along with Linda and Doris, who made it all possible.

There were two birthdays in September. Congratulations to Anne Collison, September 20, 1994 and Cora Upton, September 22, 1994.

Our sympathies to the family and friends of Kathleen Wren, who passed away Friday, September 23, 1994.

Thursday tea party was held in the auditorium. The ladies from the Kinmount United Church provided and served the tea party. It was enjoyed by everyone. Ladies providing the tea were: Olga Elias, as pianist, Mary Ferns, Laurine Dettman, Joyce Brown, Joyce Strang, and Ruth Schultz. Pat Scott helped with residents. It was a lovely afternoon.

Friday, in place of happy hour, a volunteer appreciation tea was held in the auditorium. The tables were nicely set up. At the head table were Gary McKnight, Terry Noble and Jim McMahon. Volunteer of the Year, Kathy Woods, was chosen by the residents. The volunteer with most hours went to both Muriel Harrington and Dottie Muirhead. Several resident volunteers and home volunteers were recognized and presented with volunteer service pins. The music was played by Lorraine Hutchinson. A beautiful assortment of sandwiches, veggie trays, fruit and goodies, were provided by the dietary department. Carol Martin and Vicki Coppins are to be congratulated for a terrific job.

Challenges abound at Girl Guide camp

by ANNE COSTELOE
Gooderham

The Guides of Highland District celebrated the start of another year of Guiding by coming together for a weekend camp in the Highlands. They enjoyed perfect autumn weather as they worked together to attempt a variety of challenges.

The Guides pitched their own tents (some could do it in five minutes flat - others took somewhat longer) and cooked their own meals - including delicious desserts baked in tin foil ovens (also made at camp by the Guides themselves), designed their own flags and hoisted them on improvised flagpoles.

Each Patrol was challenged to make an emergency storm shelter, rescue comrades marooned on a "desert" island, attend a "sprained" ankle - carrying their victim to medical care on an improvised stretcher... The Guides were also individually challenged to meet new friends within the district - collecting autographs.

As a district the Guides shared ceremonies, campfires and hikes. The discovery of a fallen log over a ravine proved irresistible to most of the Guides - some scrambled back through the ravine in order to walk over the natural bridge a few extra times!

As the camp drew to a close the Guides formed a human loom, singing as they wove in and out through the strands of wool held by each, weaving the girls of Gooderham, Haliburton, Minden and Wilberforce together as a district and as friends.

Baseball players travel to Ottawa

West Guilford Eleanor Cooper - 754-2388

Shane and Linda Sisson, Greg and Cheryl Cooper, Bev and Kevin Sisson, and Debbie Barry and Lance Easton all participated in the lob ball tournament in Ottawa during the past weekend. They represented the West Guilford team along with players from Haliburton on the local team.

Bev Sisson's brother, Dan Mawbey, has been in the Golan Heights with the Canadian Armed Forces from February to August and is now back in Kingston. His leave allowed him time to visit Bev and Kevin's family, his sister, Jackie, in Regina, and his mother, Ann, in Orangeville.

Perry and Kay Morrison, accompanied by Ken and Joan Noble of Tory Hill, attended the ploughing match at Pembroke on September 24. They were guests at George and Ruth Pacey's for the weekend.

Harvest Thanksgiving at St. Andrew's on October 2 saw the church decorated in fall colours complete with vegetables and produce of various kinds, including jars of preserves. The overflow of this annual expression of Thanksgiving goes to Extensicare.

October is designated as Breast Cancer Awareness month. Linda Coneybeare has put considerable thought into a fundraiser for research in this area in her organization of a fashion show. On October 28, at 7:30 in the Legion, Haliburton County women will model several outfits each including wedding dresses. All profits from the $10 tickets available at Paulette's, Marlin Travel, and Minden's Northern Lights go to breast cancer research.

At time of writing the expectation is that Kathleen Owens will be home again. She has been travelling in Scotland for about six weeks with Jean Clarke of Stormy Lake and Dorothy Robertson of Gooderham.

Legion donates $1000 to library

The Royal Canadian Legion, Branch 636 has recently made a generous donation of $1,000 to the Haliburton County Public Library for the purchase of library materials designed to be of interest to younger readers.

In acknowledging the donation, Joel Levis advised that "the selection of materials has already begun and will be entering the processing stages shortly."

"This donation is very exciting," continued Levis, "because it will enable us to improve resources in an area of tremendous need. The average age of materials in our collection for younger readers is well beyond minimal accepted standards and this will help us to make a major step towards meeting our responsibilities for public library service within the county."

"We are extremely grateful for the support shown by the Royal Canadian Legion for public library services."

As is the usual case with donations of this nature, materials will be placed in the Minden Branch but will be available to all library users through our InterLibrary Loan service.

Sunday Supper Club fills a void

by STEPHEN SHAW
Staff Reporter

THROUGH THE VOICES, laughter and clinking of plates and glasses, Gladys Scott quietly confides that she "nearly chickened out" of her first time participating in the West Guilford Sunday Supper Club three years ago.

It was the first year anniversary of her husband's death and she wasn't sure if she was ready for an evening of socializing, mingling and dining. She went through with it though and has been a regular member of the club ever since, only missing one dinner during the next three years.

"Because my husband had just died I wasn't sure if I was ready for it but it is such a nice outing," said Mrs. Scott at the club's fifth anniversary Thanksgiving dinner Sunday night at the West Guilford Recreational Centre.

For some of the club's 60-plus members, the once-a-month gatherings are a way to meet and get to know new people. For others it is simply a way to have a great Sunday night feast minus the pots and pans and dirty dishes. But for everyone who is a member, many whom are single or who have lost a loved one, it is simply a way of filling a special void in their lives.

Nancy Brink, of Nancy's Flowers in Haliburton, started the club five years ago as a way of shortening what can be long, lonely Sunday evenings for many people who are living alone. "I had recently lost my parents and was single and lonely and I felt a lot of other people were feeling the same way," said Ms. Brink, who personally phones each member every month to encourage them to come. "It's the one-to-one contact that brings them out because Sundays can be long and lonely days for a lot of people."

Emphasizing that "this is NOT a singles club," she and nine others, who were honoured at the celebration Sunday (minus two who have since passed on) started holding the dinners originally at the Cottage Restaurant. The Sunday Supper Club has since continued to grow in numbers and in festivities.

Last Sunday's celebration included the brass music of Don Wright and his Haliburton County Concert band, the singing of Pastor Paul Benson and his wife Linda as well as Shirley Gojdos and an auction called by Nancy Brink, with proceeds going to the West Guilford Baptist Church. Poetry readings and prayers are also regular features of the evenings.

Lois Emerson, one of the original nine members, opened the evening with a speech about the importance of the club to the members and the community. "This club has a real purpose," she began. "When you cook a big Sunday meal and have to eat it all alone it's no fun. Here we have the great company, great entertainment and the best cooks in the county," she said referring to the delicious home cooking by the women from the West Guilford Baptist Church, who have prepared the dinners the past four years.

Another founding member, Elva Heard, said "it's the fellowship with other Christian people and the community spirit," which has brought her out the first Sunday of each month the last five years. "I just love it."

Meeting new people and gaining new friendships, said Mrs. Emerson, is the key to the monthly dinners, "and it beats eating alone."

Brink said that while most of the 60 members and their guests are single, "we do have a few couples and we welcome more to join."

The evening included the singing of Happy Birthday to all members and guests celebrating birthdays this month and gifts and cards for each of them. The Helen Steiner Rice poem — her writings are regular features at the club's meetings — Thank You God For Everything was read by Ms. Brink during an emotional moment of the evening in which she thanked everyone, including the late Creighton Feir, for his support.

Ms. Brink's official right-hand person in helping organize the dinners, Marie Brown, perhaps best sums up the goal of the club. "I leave here feeling very happy inside."

DINNER'S ON

Organizer and founder of the Sunday Supper Club, Nancy Brink, above, begins the group's fifth anniversary Thanksgiving celebration with a touching speech. At right, some of the faithful members enjoy a Thanksgiving dinner at the West Guilford Recreation Centre

Thespians are planning Hallowe'en party for kids

Wilberforce

Flo Elliott - 448-2618

The Loop Troupe is working to hold a Hallowe'en Party for the children. Parents will likely enjoy some of the presentations as well. Don't worry, it won't be too scary for the little ones. As soon as the exact date is known I will let you know.

The Ladies Auxiliary of the Royal Canadian Legion Branch 624 is holding a fashion show on October 15 at 1:30 in the Lloyd Watson Center. Special guest will be Miss Metropolitan Toronto, MayAnne Jordens. A clogging group will be on hand to entertain you and coffee and a light lunch will be served. The tickets are $5 in advance from any member of the auxiliary or they may be purchased at the door. This group had a fashion show about three years ago and it was excellent. Be sure you come to see our own local gals acting as models; they do a great job.

The Seniors Euchre Party is on Friday, October 14 at 7:30 p.m. at the Lloyd Watson Center. All are welcome. This is actually the first card party of the new season and they will likely be held each month all winter.

The new Seniors' Residences that are being built in town are coming along very well. They look as if they will be really attractive when they are finished. There is always so much work to be done even after the buildings are finished. The grounds must be leveled and sidewalks installed, as well as planting grass and flowers. This project has made work in the community and that is always a plus.

An exercise class was started on September 28 at the United Church Hall. Everyone is welcome to attend and I understand it will be held each week on Wednesdays at 7:15 p.m.

There has been a recent book exchange at the library. Now that the weather is cooler and the days are shorter, it's really nice to have a good book to enjoy. The library has a selection to suit everyone. Congratulations to Marie Bott who won the jackpot of $300 on September 19 at the Legion bingo.

There will be a new dart league at the Legion on Wednesday evenings at 7:30.

SALE OF LAND BY PUBLIC TENDER

Municipal Tax Sales Act, 1984

The Corporation of the United Townships of Galway and Cavendish

Take Notice that tenders are invited for the purchase of the land(s) described below and will be received until 3:00 p.m. local time on November 2, 1994 at The Township Office, Kinmount, Ontario. The tenders will then be opened in public on the same day at 3:15 p.m. at The Township Office.

Description of Land(s)

A: In the Township of Galway, County of Peterborough, Province of Ontario, Concession 12, Part Lot 20, PCL 36 & 37 (Zoned Recreation Residential - Two)

B: In the Township of Cavendish, County of Peterborough, Province of Ontario, Concession 18, Part Lot 6, RP 45R-356, Part 18 (Zoned Rural)

C: In the Township of Cavendish, County of Peterborough, Province of Ontario, Concession 18, Part Lots 6 & 7 (Zoned Rural)

Minimum Tender Amount (Set out the cancellation price as of the first day of advertising)

A..... $4,775.02

B..... $4,673.96

C..... $9,379.21

Tenders must be submitted in the prescribed form and must be accompanied by a deposit in the form of a money order or of a bank draft or cheque certified by a bank, trust company or Province of Ontario Savings Office payable to the municipality (or board) and representing at least 20 percent of the tender amount. The municipality makes no representation regarding the title to or any other matters relating to the land to be sold. Responsibility for ascertaining these matters rests with the potential purchasers.

This sale is governed by the Municipal Tax Sales Act, 1984, being chapter 48 of the Statutes of Ontario 1984 and the Municipal Tax Sales Rules made under that Act. The successful purchaser will be required to pay the amount tendered plus accumulated taxes and the relevant land transfer tax. NOMINATIONS NOTICE

TO MUNICIPAL ELECTORS OF THE MUNICIPALITIES STATED BELOW

TAKE NOTICE that persons may be nominated as candidates in an election between 9:00 a.m. and 5:00 p.m. on nomination day, Friday, October 14, 1994, but nothing in section 38 of the Municipal Elections Act, prevents a person from filing a nomination paper with the clerk during normal office hours during the period from Tuesday, October 11, 1994 to Thursday, October 13, 1994 inclusive immediately preceding nomination day.

OFFICES FOR WHICH PERSONS MAY BE NOMINATED

REEVE 1 to be elected
DEPUTY-REEVE 1 to be elected
COUNCILLORS 3 to be elected (or as denoted)
PUBLIC SCHOOL TRUSTEES as noted below

FURTHER TAKE NOTICE that the manner in which nominations shall be filed is set forth in section 39 of the Municipal Elections Act. Nomination forms and full particulars of procedures to be followed may be obtained from the undersigned. Where more candidates are nominated and have made the required declarations, for election to an office, than the number required to fill the said office, notice of the time for the holding of the poll, including the advance polls, and notice of the last day for making application for a certificate to vote by proxy will be given immediately.

AND FURTHER TAKE NOTICE that where, at 5:00 p.m. on Monday, October 17, 1994, the number of candidates for an office who have been nominated and have not withdrawn under subsection 42 (1) is not sufficient to fill the number of vacancies to which candidates may be elected, subsection 43 (1) respecting acclamation applies to those candidates. On Wednesday, October 19, 1994, following nomination day, the clerk may, between the hours of 9:00 a.m. and 5:00 p.m., receive and certify additional nominations for the remaining vacancies in the office in respect of which there was an insufficient number of candidates and the provisions of subsections 40 (5) and 42 (1) apply with necessary modifications.

GIVEN UNDER OUR HANDS this 3RD DAY OF OCTOBER, 1994.

Home Words

This article is provided by local Realtors and the Ontario Real Estate Association (OREA) for the benefit of consumers in the real estate market.

IF YOU'RE THINKING of selling your home, you're probably wondering whether you should take the custom-made window coverings with you - or whether that entertainment unit you have specially made for your family room should really be sold with the house.

Undoubtedly, these items may be hard to part with. On the other hand, they will probably make your home much more attractive to potential purchasers if you include them in the sale. In fact, it's quite common for vendors to include some items that would normally be considered as "chattels" - such as drapes and appliances - in the sale of their homes, as an extra incentive to buyers.

Fixtures, on the other hand, are a different matter altogether and are basically things that are attached to the property - like light sockets, a hot tub or electric wall heaters.

The law is not always crystal clear about what constitutes a fixture - but your Realtor will guide you through the listing process and help you decide and clarify what you want to include in the sale of your home.

There may be special circumstances where something that might ordinarily be considered as a fixture is not to be included in the sale - like the antique crystal chandelier you had imported from France.

Make sure this is clearly stated in the listing agreement - and more importantly - in the agreement of purchase and sale.

If stated in the listing, Realtors will point out the various items that are not included in the sale to prospective buyers before an offer to purchase is made.

If you are absolutely certain you want to keep certain items - like the bookcase you had made to blend with the unique woodwork in your home - you may even want to remove these items from your home before you put it up for sale. That way, no potential purchasers will see them, fall in love with them and insist that they be included in the sale.

Some items on the property such as water heaters or water softeners are often provided on a rental basis. If this is the case, you should exclude the items from the purchase price and the purchaser should be asked to assume the rental.

Items that are to be included should be described along with their location in or on the property.

Remember, if you have questions or concerns, don't hesitate to talk to your Realtor. He or she is a trained professional who will help guide you smoothly through the selling process.

THE HALIBURTON COUNTY COMMUNITY ACTION GROUP ON ALCOHOL AND DRUGS

is seeking NEW MEMBERS!!
The Community Action Group (CAG) is a sub-committee of the Haliburton Social Action Committee. The purpose of the CAG is to increase public awareness of issues and concerns related to drug and alcohol use/misuse. Our main focus, has been to organize the community wide campaign for Drug Awareness Week in November. The CAG is made up of volunteers. The group meets approximately 10 times per year. We are always in need of new ideas and energy to keep the group's message to the community interesting and fun. If you are looking for more information about the CAG and/or if you are interested in joining the group, please contact Michele Bromley at FourCAST Addiction Services at 286-4897.

330 THANK YOU

BEA HANCOCK and family wish to thank friends and relatives for sharing their loss of a husband, father and grandfather. Prayers, cards, donations, flowers, food and caring were all appreciated. Joe would have been pleased. Thanks to the Haliburton Ambulance drivers, the Gordon A. Monk Funeral Home and detective Dave McMartin for his cheerful manner, and father Brian Parker and Joan for their sincerity. Thank you all.

WE WOULD LIKE TO express our special thank you to our daughter, Michelle and our son, Colin in organizing and presenting us with a very wonderful 25th Anniversary Celebration. Thank you to our parents and relatives, friends for sharing this day with us. Thank you for the lovely gifts and cards and for our Pastor Brian Plouffe who shared with us and asked God to continue to be with us in the years ahead. It was a great day!! Everett and Ruth.

A SPECIAL THANK YOU. We would like to thank Patrick Murphy of the PineStone Inn and Conference Centre for his thoughtfulness on Sept. 28/94. John & Diane Drone.

The family of the late MERLE PRINGLE would sincerely like to thank friends, relatives, and neighbours for their kind support shown to us during our recent loss. Many thanks for cards, phone calls, food, flowers and donations. We would also like to thank Dr. Heyes, nurses, and staff of the Haliburton Hospital for the care they gave Merle. Also, the ambulance attendants, V.O.N. and home care. Special thanks to Gord A. Monk Funeral home for the special support they gave to us.

330 THANK YOU

The family of the late VIVIAN RAINES (nee Scott) wish to thank her friends and relatives for their floral tributes, cards and charitable donations in Vivian's memory. Vivian so enjoyed all visitors and cards while in the hospitals and at home. A special thanks to the Monmouth Seniors' Association for the luncheon provided after the interment. Jack and family, Linda, Judy, Kelly and families.

SINCERE THANKS to friends and relatives for cards, flowers and support after the passing of Vivian RAINES (nee Scott). Special thanks to the Monmouth Senior Citizens Assoc. for the luncheon at the Lloyd Watson Memorial Centre after the interment at the cemetery. Jacque and Allan Scott and family.

400 IN MEMORIAM

PHILLIPS, FLORENCE - who passed away Oct. 3/93. Memories are Treasures
That no one can steal
Death is a heartache
That no one can heal
So wherever we go
What ever we do
We will always think of you.
Lovingly remembered by daughter Bessie and son-in-law Cliff, son Alec and daughter-in-law Edna and grandchildren.
